Kaiser Denies Pyramiding $100,000 Into Millions

Published Figures Ignore Losses and Taxes, Shipbuilder Tells House Probers

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser yesterday angrily denied that he had pyramided an original wartime shipbuilding investment of $100,000 into millions of dollars of profits.

Appearing before the House Merchant Marine Committee, which is investigating the contracts of 19 companies with the U. S. Maritime Commission, Kaiser said he made every effort during the war to have all Government agencies concerned audit the accounts of his group of contractors.

A feud between the General Accounting Office and the Maritime Commission made it impossible to obtain the sort of Government audit he had requested, Kaiser said.

Figures Misleading, He Says

The portly production expert insisted that figures made public by the committee on the wartime profits of 19 shipbuilding companies were "misleading," since they failed to include losses and taxes.

The figures were supplied by the Maritime Commission and referred to earlier yesterday in testimony by Robert E. Casey, counsel for the General Accounting Office.

The 19 yards, six of which the committee put into the Kaiser group, had a total capital investment of $22,979,275, according to the disputed table of figures.

Their combined profits totaled $356,000,612, the committee declared.

The Kaiser Co., Inc., was listed as having received $43,647,026 in profits from a $100,000 investment.

The original investment—aside from borrowed capital—"might have been" less than one million dollars, Kaiser said, but he said this company so far has suffered losses rather than profits.

Blames Steel Plant for Losses

The losses were suffered, he indicated, when it became necessary to build a steel plant to supply materials for the ships. He insisted that, according to law, the profits and losses of both the shipbuilding company and the steel plant built to supply it had to be figured as one company, so that the losses to date are about 18 million dollars.

Surrounded by a group of his experts, including his son, Edgar Kaiser, the Liberty shipbuilder argued vehemently with Committee Counsel Marvin Cole over the attorney's attempted interpretation of shipbuilding figures.

Radio Loss In Millions, Probe Told

Electronic Goods Sold to Favored Few at Fractional Prices, House Hears

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The Housing Surplus Committee yesterday heard evidence of fraud and waste that cost scores of millions of dollars.

The committee is investigating the sale of surplus radio and telephone parts worth 100 million dollars. These things marked the first day of the hearing:

1. War Assets Deputy Administrator Frank R. Creedon said electronic goods that cost 97 million dollars were sold for only 29 million, and that the expense of the sale came to more than 9 million.

2. Brig. Gen. James A. Mollison, also a WAA deputy administrator, said the Hallicrafters Co. of Chicago sold more than 200 radio trucks—for the Government—without authority. Worth $7800 apiece, the trucks were sold for $4500.

Slaughter Slaps "Circuses"

3. Chairman Slaughter (D., Mo.) aimed a left-handed slap at circus tactics of congressional committees, saying his group would proceed on evidence and not on the conclusions of staff members.

Slaughter said as the hearing began that the committee did not hear witnesses in closed sessions and that he was resolved to preserve a quasi-judicial atmosphere at the open meetings.

Creedon then took the stand for questioning by Hugh D. Wise, general counsel of the committee. Creedon said he went to WAA after working on synthetic rubber and on the atomic bomb at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

At WAA Greedon was in charge of the office of general disposition and electronics goods were handled by one of his divisions. He said all authority over these goods was delegated to Gustav A. Schwarz.

10,000 Vets' Priorities

Creedon said he found 10,000 veteran priority certificates waiting to be processed and a backlog of 75,000 declarations that military goods were surplus on which no work had been done. Most electronic sales, Creedon said were being handled by manufacturer-agents, who were paid a fixed fee and all its cost them to handle and sell the Government's goods.

Creedon said that 12 firms—out of 200 that wanted to buy—had been able to get 75 per cent of the surplus that had been sold.

The new deputy administrator was not satisfied with the electronics division, he said, so he got it shifted to another branch of WAA.

Heading this new branch was yesterday's second witnes, General Mollison, and he was not at all happy to find the electronics problem in his lap.

Calls it Dirty Job

"It was a dirty job that somebody wanted me to clean up," Mollison told Herbert S. French, deputy committee counsel. "I didn't want it. I'd heard rumors it was not working well."

Mollison drew up a list of things he thought the division needed and

Charges Red Infiltration

Clark Says U. S. Must Spend To Save Austria From Puppetry

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23 (AP).—Gen. Mark M. Clark said here today he is convinced Russia does not intend to live up to its agreement to aid in creation of an independent, democratic Austria.

Clark urged establishment by the United States of a long-range program to assist Austria and thus halt Russian "boring in."

Infiltration by Russia into Austria's economic interests already has reached 50 per cent, and the United States must "put up some money if we are going to keep Austria out of Russia's 'sphere of influence,'" Clark declared.

The general, commander of the United States forces in Austria, added that Russia continues to strip eastern Austria, not only of German assets, but also of Austrian external property, such as food, oil and factories, making it more burdensome for occupatin forces to feed Austria.

Tazewell, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—The body of Aileen Lockhart, 15-year-old Tazewell High School student, was found on the Tazewell Country Club golf course today and Commonwealth's Attorney John W. Gillespie said she had been raped and strangled with her own blouse.

The young woman's body, from which part of her clothing had been stripped, was discovered by two young coal miners as they were taking a short cut on their way to work.

The prosecutor, who with Sheriff Bowen Thompson and State Trooper Ira Ratliff took charge of the investigation, said that Miss Lockhart apparently was killed soon after she alighted from a bus.

Gillespie said the young woman, an older sister and two young men left yesterday by automobile for Oak Ridge, Tenn., Miss Lockhart for a visit and the others to their employment at that place.

En route, their automobile broke down and Gillespie said the older sister arranged for Miss Lockhart to return home by bus.

She alighted from the bus at about 2 a. m., officers said, and that was the last seen of her until the body was discovered about 5:30 a. m.

Gillespie described the slaying as "one of the worst crimes in the history of Tazewell County." Miss Lockhart was the daughter of Henry C. Lockhart of Maxwell, near here.

Estranged Husband Kills Wife, Self, Shoots Baby

Clifton Forge, Va., Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A Veterans' Administration employe today shot and killed his estranged wife, critically wounded his 3-year-old daughter, injured his mother-in-law and then killed himself.

Police Chief Robert F. Craft said the man, Clark Beckner, about 27, died instantly of self-inflicted wounds only a few minutes after his pretty blonde wife, Mrs. Mavis Beckner, died on the front lawn of her parents' home.

The couple's daughter, Catherine, was wounded in the chest and throat. Doctors, who called her condition critical, said she was not expected to live.

Mother-in-Law Shot

Craft said Mrs. Beckner's mother, Mrs. W. A. Rule, was wounded in the shoulder. Her injury was not considered critical.

Mrs. Beckner, about 25 years old, had filed suit for divorce 10 days ago following a six-month separation and had been living with her parents, prominent in this small town.

The former marine, Clark Beckner, turned the .32-caliber weapon on himself as police, called by terrified neighbors, arrived at the home of Mrs. Beckner's parents, where the shooting occurred.

Mrs. Beckner staggered to the lawn in front of the house and died from two wounds in the chest.

Mrs. Rule said her son-in-law came to her home in a taxi and was met at the door by his wife.

Shoots Wife at Door

He whipped out the gun and shot her twice in the chest, Mrs. Rule told Craft. Then he went down the hall, firing as he went, and shot his daughter.

Mrs. Rule said Beckner reloaded the pistol, came into the dining room and shot her.

Neighbors who saw the taxi drive up and heard the gunfire, called police and sent for Rule, a prominent furniture dealer. When the officers arrived, Craft, said, Beckner killed himself.

Wallace's Aid Is Welcomed By Hannegan

Chairman Says Former Secretary May Address Any Party Gathering

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan said today the Democratic Party would welcome support of its candidates in the November 5 election from Henry A. Wallace, ousted Secretary of Commerce.

"I earnestly hope Mr. Wallace supports the party's candidates, and I think he will," Hannegan said in an interview. "I will be very happy to try to secure his services as a speaker for any engagement requested by Democratic organizations in the campaign."

The Democratic national chairman said there was no move in the national committee to bar the former Commerce Secretary from participation in the campaign, and added: "We do not select speakers. We act as a conduit. I will personally be glad to book Wallace as a speaker."

Hannegan said he thought the selection by President Truman of W. Averell Harriman as successor to Wallace was "an excellent appointment."

"Mr. Harriman is capable and qualified," Hannegan declared.

Wallace Takes Breather

Toronto, Ontario, Sept. 23 (INS).—Henry A. Wallace indicated today in an interview with the Washington correspondent of the Toronto Star that he will make no public addresses or make any public statements "for the next two or three weeks."

Wallace told the Star that he wants to get his political wind before he reappears on the public stage, adding:

"I do not want to have my future bound by any casual word which I might utter at this time."

Wallace said:

"This is the first breathing spell I have had since I entered Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet in 1933 and I just want to sit back for a time and get a fresh view of things.

"But I will tell you this, I am going to do things my own way. That is why I do not want to bind myself or jeopardize my future actions by a statement which I might make now."

5 Navy Fliers And Mexican Die in Crash

Plane Missing Friday Found; Two Victims Known in Washington

Mexico City, Sept. 23 (AP).—The wreckage of a United States Naval plane lost on a flight from Mexico City to Corpus Christi, Tex., last Friday, was found today in the mountains near Texcoco, a village 35 miles east of here. All six passengers were dead.

Aboard the plane were Comdr. Robert M. Gavett, a New Jersey man well-known in Washington, and Lieut. Comdr. Raymond P. Becker, believed to be a Washingtonian. Also aboard were Chief Aviation Radioman Lee E. Pleasant; Chief Aviation Machinist's Mate Carl E. Gill, Aviation Pilot 1st Class Charles R. Cleary and Mexican Navy Lieut. Octavio Diaz de Rivera, aide to Gavett.

It appeared the plane had skimmed over the tops of trees for some distance before it crashed into a larger tree which ripped off the left wing. The plane then dropped and hit a huge boulder, nosing over.

Gavett Liaison Officer

The Navy here said yesterday that Commander Gavett served as liaison officer with the Latin-American countries in the training of their naval officers at United States Navy aviation schools.

He was stationed at the naval air station, Corpus Christi, Tex. but has served here on temporary duty on several occasions and had many friends in Washington. His home was at Plainfield, N. J., A veteran of both World Wars, Gavett lived in Spain for many years. He edited a newspaper there during the Spanish Civil War.

Navy records list Lieutenant Commander Becker as making his home at 2227 M st. nw. This, however, is the old Weightman School, now housing several selective service boards. Officials on duty there last night had no knowledge of him.

The Navy said that Gill was from Council Bluffs, Iowa, and that Cleary's father lives in Farmingdale, N. Y., and his mother, Mrs. Blanche Larsen, in Altadena, Calif. The home address of CPO Pleasant was not listed.

French Crash Mystery

Grenoble, France, Sept. 23 (AP).—French mountaineers reached the wreckage of a U. S. Army plane high in the grim chalk peaks of the Obriou Mountains tonight and uncovered a mystery amid the evidence of instant death.

In the shattered debris of Flying Fortress No. 46934 the searchers found remnants of a bayb's clothing.

Eight bodies found in the vicinity of the plane were so badly disfigured that it was impossible to identify any one as the corpse of an infant, but portions of a dress, shoes and a coat found at the scene were unmistakably those of a child.

Papers, apparently belonging to a "Sergt. Marc Meyer" and "Lieutenant Smith" also were found. A U. S. B-17 disappeared with 11 men aboard on August 29 on a flight from Frankfurt to Casablanca, and the Army identified two of those making the flight as Lieut. George C. Smith, the navigator, and Sergt.

Lightning Fells Three as They Work on Plane

'Potential Tornado' Brings .28 Inches of Rain in 3 Hours Here

A lighting bolt fingered out of low-hanging clouds in yesterday's rainstorm, struck a C-47 transport at Bolling Field and felled three mechanics who were working on it.

Most seriously hurt was Thomas C. Parks, 34-year-old civilian, of 423 Newcomb st. nse., who was unconscious more than three minutes before being revived by base hospital emergency workers. Parks was able to go home unattended, however, and within an hour showed no ill effects.

The other two injured were Llewellyn Crites, 26, of 333 Riley st. se., who suffered minor burises when knocked to the ground, and M/Sergt. Charles Stokes, Bolling Field mechanic, who suffered from stock. The plane was undamaged.

The lightning bolt came out of what the Weather Bureau said was a "potential tornado" which swept up from Quantico, Va.

It dumped about .28 of an inch of rain in the area in about three hours, dropped temperatures from 80 to 76 degrees, but left high humidity. The storm was a peculiar "funnel like" formation caused by updrafts.

The only reason it didn't turn into a tornado was because it didn't last long enough, the bureau said.

Yesterday was the first day of autumn.

The forecast for today is for clearing with brisk northwest winds. The autumn equinox—when the sun crosses the equator—will usher in several weeks of pleasant, sunny weather, some Indian Summer days and crisp nights, the Weather Bureau said.

Public School Enrollment Up 10,000 in D. C.

A total of 83,992 students, 10,000 more than last year, turned out for the opening of District public schools yesterday.

School officials said the huge increase resulted from the return of veterans and the fact that the opening day of school does not coincide with a Jewish holiday this year, as it did last fall.

Opening day enrollment, which includes every level from kindergarten to teachers' college, is nevertheless almost 5000 above the average daily attendance of the 1945-46 school year. It falls only 1000 short of school officials' predictions.

Elementary school youngsters, with well-scrubbed faces and an obvious pride in their "new school outfits" trooped back to classrooms 48,000 strong.

Kindergarten Overcrowded

Many eager children just being introduced to the mystery of school work turned out an hour before the scheduled 9 a. m. opening hour, but teachers reported they had their share of sullen or weeping children who wanted to go home to their mothers.

School officers said they were distressed, however, by the plight of many parents and children who discovered only yesterday that many kindergartens are too crowded to take new admissions.

Miss Dorothy Lewis, Kimball School principal; said mothers and children frequently wept at the news for "kindergarten has become an important part of our education system and they had obviously been planning for the opening of school all summer."

Kimball, Miss Lewis said, closed its enrollment last May, when kindergarten registration of 98 was reached, and 27 children are on a waiting list for possible openings in the middle of the year.

Others With Waiting Lists

A partial list of other schools with waiting lists include: Bryan, Buchanan, Patterson, Beers, Burville, Charles Young, Carver and Smothers. Schools do not have enough teachers and space to meet the sudden upsurge in kindergarten age children which is seen this year as a result of a sharp upswing

Cardinals Keep ½ Game Lead; Beat Cubs, 1-0

Dodgers Also Win; Score Five in 8th To Drop Phils, 6-1

The St. Louis Cardinals clung to their precarious half-game lead in the torrid National League flag chase yesterday, defeating the Chicago Cubs, 1 to 0, as the Brooklyn Dodgers were whipping the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 1. The Cards have five more games to play, the Dodgers four.

Harry (The Cat) Brecheen continued his mastery over the Cubs, yielding nine hits, but keeping them scattered. It was his fifth victory in six starts against the Bruins. Brecheen personally saw to it he had a working margin by driving in the only run with a second-inning single.

The Dodgers and Phils were locked in a tight 1-to-1 duel when the Card-Cub score was posted as the Dodgers came to bat in their half of the eighth. They promptly rocked Ken Raffensberger for five runs to lock the verdict. Rube Melton held the Phils safe for the Bums.

At Bel Air, Md., two Wilmington, Del., horsemen, William F. Mink and Paul E. Middleton pleaded guilty to the charge of doping horses at that track July 24. They were fined $1000 each and costs.

Independence, Mo., Sept. 23 (AP). Mrs. Harry Truman left for the White House today after spending the summer at the family home. She is expected in Washington Tuesday morning.

'Fastest Human in World'

Gazelle Boy's Uncanny Speed Confirmed by Prince, Doctor

Cairo, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Prince Fawez El Shaalan, leader of a Transjordan desert tribe which recently captured a grass-eating "gazelle boy," said today he had chased the fleet-footed youth for two hours in an automobile before catching him.

His eye-witness story of the pursuit of the "Tarzan" added to the controversy over reports that the boy, believed to be 14 or 15 years old, could run at a speed of 50 miles an hour.

"We were hunting gazelles in the desert by car when suddenly I saw a human form among these gracious beasts," the prince related. "I ordered by companions to cease firing and we pursued the form. Although we were in a car, it took us two hours to catch up with the boy, who fell down exhausted."

The "gazelle boy" was taken to a hospital in Baghdad.

Since then, he has been examined by numerous physicians. One doctor said: "I think he is the fastest runner in the world and that he could halve any record in the world."

The physician added that "this child acts, eats and cries like a gazelle, but there is no doubt he is a human being. Apparently he was brought up by the gazelles after having been abandoned by his mother. That often happens among the Bedouins in the desert."

When first taken to the hospital the boy made frequent escape attempts. Now he has a child's curiosity and imitates everyone around him.

Doctors said the boy had been living solely on plants, but they doubted if he could have survived much longer on such a diet. When captured he was extremely thin, although he had a wiry strength approaching that of a man. Now he has learned to eat human food.

The young savage is able to utter only inarticulate, animal-like sounds. Many specialists doubt that he ever will use human speech. One examiner believed him to be an imbecile.

Girl in Male Togs Floors Accuser In Stabbing Trial

Chicago, Sept. 23 (INS).—Catherine E. Smith, 38, clad in male attire, walked into court today, strode over to complaining witness Charles Schultz, gave him the old one-two and watched him fall against a counsel table.

Then she leaned over the bench and snarled at Judge Gibson E. Gorman:

"Well, what are you going to do about it, pal?"

The judge sent Catherine off to the Behavior Clinic and continued her arraignment on charges of stabbing Schultz during an $85 holdup.

Alabama's Folsom Set for Don Juan Role in Hollywood

Cullman, Ala., Sept. 23 (AP).—Hollywood movie actresses had fair warning today.

"I'm going to kiss every movie star in California before I get back," declared Governor-Designate James E. (Big Jim) Folsom of Alabama as he prepared to leave for the American Legion convention in Hollywood.

Six-foot eight-inch Folsom developed a reputation for "kissing technique" in his successful summer campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He is unmarried.

European Command Goes to Adm. Conolly

Southampton, England, Sept. 23 (AP).—Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, commander of United States naval forces in Europe, handed over his command today to Admiral Richard L. Conolly. Hewitt has been assigned to the Naval War College in Washington.

No Beef, So Horsemeat Is Served by Hospitals

Boston, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Horsemeat went on the benus of two Boston hospitals today.

Officials at the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary said there was no beef on hand and the horsemeat is just as good for patients as beef, although tougher.

Second Traffic Death of Day

Bus Kills California Woman On Highway South of Laurel

A 27-year-old California woman was struck and killed by a bus yesterday afternoon at Oak Crest, Md., 2 miles south of Laurel.

Her death marked the second reported for the day from traffic accidents in the Washington metropolitan area. The first was the death of George Whitehead, jr., 21, of Hinsdale, N. H., in Casualty Hospital from injuries sustained Sunday when he was thrown from his motorcycle at Oxon Hill, Md.

Maryland State Police of the Waterloo barracks identified the woman pedestrian as Miss Marie H. Alvey of Long Beach, Calif. They said she was struck by a Trailways bus and died within 10 minutes.

In another Maryland accident yesterday, James T. Thiede, 21, of Terre Haute, Ind., was seriously injured when a gravel, sand and cement truck in collision with his automobile overturned on his vehicle and pinned him under the wreckage.

The truck-automobile collision occurred near where Brookville rd. runs into the East-West hwy. Thiede's car, headed east on the highway, collided with the loaded truck which was entering the highway from Brookfield rd. Both vehicles ran off the road and up an embankment where the truck

Brazil Rejects U. N. Complaint

Soviet Lashes U. S. for Keeping Troops in Friendly Countries

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP). Soviet Russia lashed out in the United Nations Security Council tonight against the presence of United States troops in China, Iceland and Latin-America and drew a sharp response from the Brazilian delegate.

The Council adjourned until 3 p. m. tomorrow without deciding whether to place on the agenda a resolution put forward by Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate and president of the Council, asking for information on the dispositions of Allied troops in foreign non-enemy states.

Gromyko declared there had been a "wave of protests" against the continued stay of British and American troops in China, India, Iraq, Egypt, Iceland, Indonesia, Greece, Panama, Brazil and South America.

Dr. Pedro Leao Velloso, Brazilian delegate, snapped back that there is "not one United States soldier on Brazilian soil today as I speak to you." He supported British, United States, Australian and the Netherlands delegates in opposition to the Russian proposal, which so far has received the lone backing of the Polish delegate.

Gromyko named names in the Council in respone to a challenge from the United States, Britain and

Chinese Faces Indictment in Slaying of Cousin

Lee Fook, 60, of 517 H st. nw., a Chinese bookkeeper, yesterday was ordered held for action of the grand jury in connection with the fatal stabbing of a distant cousin.

Fook, who professed to remember only that he "had a fight" and disclaimed knowing that his victim had died, was arrested Sunday afternoon beside the body of his victim at Georgia ave. and Buchanan st. nw. The dead man was Lee Ying Toy, 40, operator of a Chinese laundry at 4530 Georgia ave. nw.

Witnesses told police Fook chased Toy from his laundry to the intersection and around and around a tree there, stabbing him with a short-bladed boning knife. The stabbing followed an altercation over the dead man's request for financial help to send his ill brothre back to China, police said.

Dead Skunk Adds To Troubles in Quarantined Home

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (AP).—With a bow and arrow, Will Stevenson, 11, today shot a skunk which invaded his parents' home.

Now the Stevensons can't move out of the mighty odiferous house because their youngest son, Sherwood, 8, is quarantined with chicken pox. They ate breakfast out in the back yard in the rain.

Ohio Miners Refuse To Work Without Meat

Athens, Ohio, Sept. 23 (AP).—The 160 employes at the Starr-Jackson Mine in nearby Coonville walked out today, refusing to work "until we get some meat," mine superintendent Gerald Wallace reported.

Garrett Ogg, president of United Mine Workers' Local 270, said the men would consider their action at a meeting next Saturday.

Sen. Pepper, Too, Calls Appointment An 'Excellent' One

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Robert R. Wason, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said today that the appointment of W. Averell Harriman as Secretary of Commerce will strengthen the President's Cabinet.

"Mr. Harriman is a businessman with international understanding," Wason said. "He will strengthen the Cabinet of the President, bring prestige to the Nation abroad and should finally give the Commerce Department a business adminstration."

President William K. Jackson of the United States Chamber of Commerce said in a statement from Denver that American businessmen welcome Harriman's appointment. He added:

"The Chamber of Commerce of the United States had urged appointment of a man of proven attainments and have an unquestioned devotion to American ideals. Mr. Harriman meets these qualifications. . . .

"At the same time his appointment should promote business confidence in the present storm of uncertainty and distrust that has been sweeping the country in recent weeks."

"Excellent Choice," Says Pepper

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 23 (AP).—Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said today that W. Averell Harriman is an "excellent choice" for Secretary of Commerce.

President Truman announced last night that he was appointing Harriman, present United States Ambassador to Great Britain, to succeed Henry A. Wallace.

"Although Mr. Harriman is the son of a very rich man and a very rich man himself," Pepper said, "President Roosevelt brought him into his administration several years ago because he has a very liberal and progressive attitude towards the public interest. His own great business experience and his many years in the public service at home and abroad highly fit him for distinguished service as Secretary of Commerce."

Harriman Indorses Foreign Policy

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—W. Averell Harriman declared today "I fully support the foreign policy" of President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes, and added he thought most other Americans held the same view.

The handsome diplomat, who will succeed the ousted Henry Wallace as U. S. Secretary of Commerce, said that he believed Mr. Truman and Secretary Byrnes were "carrying on the high principles laid down by Mr. Roosevelt. There lies the road to peace.

At a news conference held after the formal statement was issued Harriman declined to discuss further Mr. Byrnes' foreign policy. He commented that "American foreign policy in the last analysis is based on public opinion, and I think the main body of American public opinion is supporting Mr. Truman and Mr. Byrnes."

He disclosed he had talked with Byrnes by telephone today and the latter had "a kind word" about the appointment. Harriman is planning to go to Paris, then will leave "relatively soon" for the United States.

No Electioneering Plans

Since the opening of the Peace Conference Harriman has spent most of his time in Paris. He returned to London about 10 days ago.

Asked if he planned to take part in the election campaign at home, he replied: "I haven't given that question any consideration at all."

Harriman declined to discuss the speech in New York by Wallace which led to his dismissal as Secretary of Commerce. Harriman had no comment, also, regarding regarding his successor as United States Ambassador to England.

He had just returned from a weekend in the country when he met with the newsmen.

He said that Mr. Truman mentioned the appointment to him in a telephone conversation Saturday night and that he told the President he was "not anxious to accept, since I wanted to check first with my legal and business advisers, and I asked him to give me until Sunday."

Stresses Economic Stability

Mr. Truman called again at midnight Sunday. Harriman said he had conferred with his associates by telephone in the meantime and that he told the President "I was free to accept" the appointment. The President "made the appointment immediately afterwards," Harriman conferred.

He stressed to the newsmen the importance of American economic stability and said he believed that an improvement "in the standard of life all over the world is possible." He added: "That was the basis of Mr. Roosevelt's policy, which Mr. Truman is carrying on."

Harriman's formal statement said:

"I welcome the opportunity of joining Mr. Truman's Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce I. know the department well, as I am an active member and then chairman of the Business Advisory Committee of the Department of Commerce during Mr. Roosevelt's first two terms.

Sees World Looking to U. S.

"During the past six years, in representing Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman on various missions overseas, I have had the opportunity to learn at first hand of the grave economic problems that face the peoples of Europe and Asia. They look to us with hope and faith for help and moral leadership.

"In playing our part in world reconstruction the development of a stable and expanding economy at home is of prime importance. Expanding peacetime productivity in the United States, available for needs on all our people and for export as well, is the essential and sound foundation of prosperity and happiness at home, and for our ability in cooperation with other nations to offer a continuing helpful hand to the people of the world.

"It is an essential base for the lasting peace that all peoples crave. I fully support the foreign policy of Mr. Truman and Mr. Byrnes, who are carrying on the high principles laid down by Mr. Roosevelt. There lies the road to peace."

OPA Permits Cut in Size Of Candy Bars

The OPA yesterday told candy makers they could either raise prices or reduce sizes of candy bars selling for 5 and 10 cents apiece.

OPA experts predicted the sizes would be reduced in most cases. Included in the ruling with candy bars are wafers, mints, caramels, fudges, gums, jellies and flavored hard candies.

While OPA was making this and several other price changes, Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) urged President Truman to call a special session of Congress to repeal the OPA law.

Thomas telegraphed Truman that butchers' and grocers' shelves have "never been so bare" in New Jersey. People are "universally dissatisfied," he said.

Rationing Order Eased

Besides the ruling on candy bars, OPA yesterday:

1. Permitted owners of stocks of syrups and liquid sugar to dispose of old stocks without ratiining in order to ease hardship resulting from August 22 rationing order that tightened rationing of syrups.

2. Raised prices on nail kegs 12 to 14 per cent and Western softwood shingles 10 per cent in order to boost production of the housing program.

3. Raised ceilings on innerspring mattresses sold direct to consumers by manufacturers 12 per cent. This was granted to meet a simillar raise recently allowed on mattresses moving through normal trade channels.

Egg Increase Predicted

Higher prices for eggs are forecast by the Department of Agriculture next year.

Also "prices received by farmers for chickens and turkeys will probably reach new highs in late 1946 or early 1947 when meat supplies will continue short and consumer incomes will be high" the department says.

The increased price for eggs, chickens and turkeys will not be wholly due to the fewer numbers. Part of the higher prices will be due to the law that requires the Government to support the market at not less than 90 per cent of parity.

Parity prices are described as prices equally fair to consumers and producers. Parity prices of farm products rise and fall with rises and declines in the prices of things farmers buy.

Must Bolster Prices

The department stated that, because fo a sharp increases in the prices of things farmers buy, it will be required to support egg prices at least 7 per cent above those of the heavy production season this year.

The average price received by farmers for eggs during the March-June heavy production season this year was 32.4 cents a dozen.

In the Maryland-Delaware are the prices received for finished broilers on September 1 averaged 34.4 cents a pound compared with 33.9 August 1, and 29.3 September 1, 1945.

The number of broilers on hand in the Delaware-Maryland region is reported to be "only a little more than half the number a year ago." It is estimated at 12 per cent less than a month ago.

AWOL Marine Held on Md. Murder Count

A 22-year-old, AWOL Washington-based marine was held on a murder charge in Hagerstown, Md., yesterday in connection with the death of Grover C. Boward, 58, following an altercation Saturday night.

The marine was Pfc. Ralph Layman Nokes, of Hagerstown, attached to D Company, Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps headquarters.

A third man, John Brown, 28, was arrested for an assault on Nokes, who suffered knife wounds in the arm and back. Detective Sergt. Wayne A. Sellman said Nokes admitted scuffling with Boward after Boward made a remark to the girl the marine was escorting. Sellman said Nokes admitted he hit or pushed the older man.

Nokes, who enlisted in the Marines June 1, 1944, and reenlisted May 25 of this year, has been absent without leave from barracks here since September 15, Marine Corps officials said.

He is scheduled for a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Harry E. Snyder tomorrow.

Officers Back Col. Silvester At Inquiry

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

An American general who relieved Col. Lindsay McD. Silvester—deposed wartime commander of the Seventh Armored Division—tol dan Army court of inquiry yesterday that he heard no criticism of Silvester from his British superiors.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Hasbrouck, now deputy chief of Army Ground Forces, testified that he believed Lieut. Gen. Sir Richard O'Connor, corps commander over Silvester in Holland, to have been "sincere" in commending him for his combat actions.

He made the statement under questioning by Silvester's attorney, Samuel T. Ansell. Ansell cited earlier testimony by Gen. Omar N. Bradley that he believed O'Connor had had "his tongue in his cheek" when he wrote Silvester a commendatory letter after the fighting in the "little Ardennes" battle in Holland in the fall of 1944.

Relieved in October, 1944

Silvester was relieved of command of the Seventh Armored Division October 31, 1944, and reduced from major general to his permanent rank of colonel on orders of General Bradley, then commander of the Twelfth Army Group.

Bradley, according to Silvester's counsel, acted on "verbal complaints" of the late Gen. George C. Patton and Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker. Walker was corps commander over the Seventh Division when it was part of Patton's army, prior to its shift to Holland.

General Hasbrouck said he was present when General O'Connor told Colonel Silvester he was being relieved. He testified that O'Connor said the action was not "his doing."

"General O'Connor," Hasbrouck told the court, "made no specific criticism of the Seventh Division's operations and the only remark that might be construed as derogatory to General Silvester was to the effect that 'of course you aren't a Napoleon.'"

Letter Reveals Tito's Drive Against Church

Rome, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—The last pastoral letter Archbishop Aloysius Steppinac wrote before Yugoslav authorities arrested him as a suspected "enemy of the state," suggested that Marshal Tito's government was trying to force the Catholic Church of Yugoslavia to break relations with the Vatican, it was revealed today.

Archbishop Stepinac said that those urging such a move "know very well that we won't listen to them."

"We don't want any conflict with state authorities . . . we pray that God will enlighten with his truth those managing the state—our country—in order that they may learn the state flourishes best when its citizens are contented, said Stepinac's letter to three million Yugoslav Catholics.

The letter also revealed a Yugoslav campaign of suppression against the church. It said many priests had been imprisoned, Catholic papers were not allowed to publish freely, limitations were put on church property, church institutions were forbidden to help the poor, and nuns were not permitted to practice their profession.

(Dispatches from Belgrade said Yugoslavia's controlled newspapers continued to belabor the church as an enemy of Tito's government and Stepnic as a leader of "terrorism." He is expected to be indicted Thursday for "crimes against the people and the state).

Yugoslavias Holding American

Belgrade, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Yugoslav foreign office informed the United States Embassy today that Roy H. Stoeckel of Kearney, N. J., a civilian employe of the U. S. Army at Linz, Austria, is held on charges of illegally crossing the border and taking photographs of "different prohibited objects."

The Yugoslav note was the first reply to requests by the American Embassy regarding the whereabouts of Stoeckel. The "Embassy will be informed on the further course of the investigation," it said.

Court Upsets Allocation of Liquor Grain

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A ruling that may cloud many recent actions by the Department of Agriculture, OPA and the Civilian Production Administration was handed down in District Court today.

In a late afternoon decision, Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut blocked delivery of 500,000 bushels of excess grain to American distilleries on the grounds that the method of allocation was illegal.

The court ruled that the "historical" basis used by Agriculture Secretayr Anderson last month in distributing the grain to distillers was contrary to the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944.

"In my view," the court held, "the secretary had disobeyed congressional mandate. The historical basis is directly opposed to legislative direction. An injunction will be issued."

Anderson had planned to allot the half-million extra bushels in September to distillers on the basis of what beverage alcohol each produced in the 1939-41 period.

Anderson's action was attacked by Publicker Industries of Philadelphia, one of the largest liquor firms in the country. Publicker insisted that other bases for allocation should have been considered, including plant capacity.

The court battle was precipitated on August 24, when Anderson announced a general softening in restrictions on the use of grains. In the same announcement that heralded the return of white bread, Anderson stated that the amount of grain used during September in the distilling of liquors would be increased 20 per cent.

3,000,000 Bushel Total

The increased amount available for liquor would be 500,000 bushels—or a total of three million bushels in place of the two and one-half in August.

Anderson at that time stated that "the increases will go to companies whose plants historically have been the principal producers of distilled spirits."

Two days later Publicker filed its suit for injunction. The ruling yesterday granted Publicker a "preliminary injunction" pending trial.

Action Called Unfair

In its action Publicker declared:

1. That the August allocation was based on plant capacity, whereas the increase for September was to be divided on the basis of past production.

2. That this method was unfair to Publicker because it was engaged in production of war material during the period on which such allocations were based.

In August Publicker interests received more than 20 per cent of the total allocation of grain, as compared with 33.5 per cent that went to its "big four" competitors, Hiram Walker, Schenley, Seagram and National Distillers.

Under the September "historical" basis, Publicker would have received only 14½ per cent as compared with 41½ for the "Big Four."

Allotment Held up

Upon Publicker's challenge Agriculture announced that the extra allotment of grain for September would be held up. Instead the lower allocation of August was continued into this month.

In an affidavit that was part of the defense against Publicker's attack, Secretary Anderson declared that the "historical" basis used by Agriculture was the same that had been used 50 to 60 times by OPA, CPA and Agriculture in determining other allocations.

If Justice Schweinhaut's ruling yesterday is upheld after a full trial, and a permanent injunction issued, the cases Anderson refered to may be subject to similar attack, attorneys admitted last night.

Included in the Publicker interests, controlled by the Publicker family of Philadelphia, are Continental Distilling, Kinzie and Publicker. They constitute the largest single distilling interest in the country.

OPA Approves Capital Garage 80c Day Rate

A ceiling of 80 cents a day for daytime automobile parking was approved yesterday by the District office of OPA for the Capital Garage at 1320 New York ave. nw.

A rate increase was requested by the operators before reopening the garage to the public after three years' use by the Federal Government. The new rates carry a boost of 5 cents an hour for the first two hours, half the increase sought by the owners, the National Mortgage and Investment Co.

The daytime rate was set at 35 cents for the first hour, 15 cents for the second hour and 5 cents for each succeeding hour with a maximum daily charge of 80 cents. The increase was approved by Vincent A. Holmes, District OPA director.

The firm had sought a rate of 40 cents for the first hour, 20 for the second, 10 for the third and 5 cents for each additional hour.

Storm Center Since 1943

The parking garage became a storm center after the Government took over the structure in 1943. It was turned back to its owners September 1.

Reopening of the garage is expected to partially relieve the parking congestion in downtown Washington.

The last obstacle blocking the reopening is approval of rates for the service and repair shops at the garage, according to Joseph B. Schaff, president of the corporation.

The OPA said the rates are now being "processed," but action was awaiting the Wage Stabilization Board's approval of the proposed employes' wage scale. Schaff said he filed his proposed scale with the WSB Friday.

While the new parking rates are not satisfactory to the firm, Schaaff said he is "anxious" to reopen the garage and "may try to get by" with the schedule. However, he said, the firm has 60 days to file an appeal for higher rates.

Evening Rates Up 5 Cents

The OPA also approved a five-cent increase in evening parking rates, from 35 cents to 40 cents an hour during the 6 p. m. to 1 a. m. period.

Overnight parking costs remain at $1 from 6 p. m. to 10 a. m., with no increase sought, the OPA said.

"Dead storage parking rates will be boosted from $13.50 a month to $16.50 and "live" storage rates from $20 to $24.50 monthly, the QPA said.

When the garage was under contract to Federal Works Agency some 48 Federal agencies and bureaus stored and serviced approximately 500 vehicles in the building. Nearly 20 per cent of the structure was used for storage of duplicate Government files. Congress and traffic experts claimed the annual operating cost to the Government was $181,000.

Green Seeks Federal Aid in Poll Tax Fight

John Locke Green, Virginia Republican leader and Arlington, Va., attorney, has called upon the Department of Justice for the second time for aid in his fight to abolish poll taxes.

Green, as counsel for Lawrence Michael, Republican nominee for Congress, is seeking a Federal injunction to halt the collection of poll taxes in the Eighth Virginia Congressional District.

His suit is scheduled for a hearing Monday at Richmond. In a letter to Attorney General Tom C. Clark, Green asked him to "protect the rights of the 50,000 disfranchised citizens" of the district.

Green said he was dissatisfied with the results from an earlier appeal to Clark. He said 50,000 persons in his district are unable to vote because the Virginia statutes make poll tax payment a prerequisite to balloting.

Defendants in the suit are Governor Tuck, State Attorney General A. P. Staples and the commissioners of revenue and treasurers of the district's 15 counties, with the exception of Green, who is treasurer of Arlington County.

Illicit Loan Agency Faces Prosecution

First action in more than six months against alleged illicit loan agencies will be taken here shortly, it was learned yesterday.

Robert D. Wise, assistant Corporation Counsel, said his office is now preparing one case, and that numerous other complaints have been received recently concerning loans at more than six per cent per year and of loans issued by unlicensed agencies. Wise said most of the complaints were against auto loan agencies.

Culture Unit Stresses Mass Information

Promotion of international understanding through the press, radio and motion pictures got top attention yesterday at the first meeting of the National Commission on Educational, Scientific and Cultural Cooperation.

The commission, established to advise the United States delegation to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) will continue its sessions through Thursday.

Assistant Secretary of State William Bentan, in his opening address, urged the commission to consider extensive use of the instruments of mass information.

Emphasis on the press, rdaio and films, he said, will be necessary if UNESCO is to reach "hundreds of millions who do not read books, who never went to college."

This theme will be continued tomorrow at a round-table on mass communications presided over by Edward R. Murrow, a vice president and former European news chief of the Columbia Broadcasting system.

Participating with Murrow in the round-table will be Ward Barnes, editor of the Eagle Grove (Iowa) Eagle, representing the National Editorial Association; Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor; Edward Barrett, editorial director of Newsweek magazine; Chester Bowles, former OPA administrator; Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America and former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Donald M. Nelson, wartime chief of the War Production Board and now president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and John Hay Whitney, special adviser on public affairs for the State Department.

At the opening session, Benton read a greeting cabled from Paris by Secretary of State Byrnes, who said that if UNESCO can help clear away suspicion and mistrust between nations, "the peoples of the world will push a head more surely and more rapidly."

Dr. Ben M. Cherrington, professor of international relations at the University of Denver, served as temporary chairman of the commission.

Ike Says World Can't Stand Another War

Berlin, Sept. 23 (AP).—Gen. Eisenhower was quoted in a Washington dispatch to Stars and Stripes today as saying he was "convinced that the world cannot stand another global war and, as I see it, the thing to prevent such a tragedy happening is education."

The interview was given before the United States Chief of Staff departed for Europe to make a general inspection of American occupation forces. He left Halifax by ship today for Britain.

Eisenhower spoke fervently of his "foremost belief—my belief in democracy." The Army newspaper said his words were intended as a special message to American soldiers.

"No one wants war," Stars and Stripes quoted Eisenhower. "The common man everywhere hates war. We must enlist that hatred of war to prevent it happening again.

"The peoples of the world must be made to realize how much the very thinking of war costs us all—how much of the revenue of our countries is being diverted to the purpose of war in these nonproductive expenditures."

Eisenhower said he realized that public opinion in some countries was harder to reach than in the United States, but he felt America should try appeals straight to the people by radio broadcasts.

He said it was the jobs of every man in the European occupation forces to "show, by example, that our way of life is best."

Jap Invasion Bill Buys $5 Car Pass But Brings Arrest

A defendant in Municipal Court yesterday was charged with trying to buy a street car pass on three occasions with Jap invasion money.

He is Herbert Jonathan, 38, 757 Girard st. nw. He pleaded innocent to larceny and after some testimony was heard the case was continued under $1000 bond until Thursday.

Motorman Norman O. Meyer, 903 E st. se., told Judge Neilson he picked up Jonathon at Sixth and T sts. nw., took the five-peso invasion bill and gave Jonathon a pass and $3.75 change. "Then I discovered it wasn't a $5 bill," he said.

Meyer said Jonathon tried it again on September 12, and again September 14. This time police were called. Judge Neilson continued the case for study.

AMERICAN AIRLINES

SUPERMAN

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Has The Air Been Cleared?

MR. BYRNES has had a resounding personal triumph in his encounter with Mr. Wallace. The elementary principle that a government cannot have two contradictory spokesman has been vindicated. The bipartisan coalition has been saved. By the appointment of Mr. Harriman Mr. Truman has repaired some of the damage. The conviction of the American people that Soviet expansion must be opposed resolutely has been made manifest.

LIPPMANN

But much confusion remains, and there will have to be most patient and searching discussion before it can be cleared up. The real question is not whether Russian expansion should be opposed but how it can be opposed successfully. This question has been obscured by the Wallace controversy. But the trend of events will compel us to consider it, and to ask ourselves whether, having taken the decision to oppose the Soviet expansion, Mr. Byrnes has adopted a workable program for achieving his diplomatic ends.

ALL THIS, I know, is being done in the sacred name of open diplomacy. But it is the ruin of diplomacy, which cannot be conducted except into trouble on the false assumption that a society of sovereign states can be governed as if it were a parliamentary democracy of individual persons. Men cannot play chess successfully if they are under the impression that they are playing checkers. The procedure of this conference was developed by the three American Senators, and the consequences are disastrous. There is no progress toward peace. There is an acute deterioration of human relations everywhere.

If this horrible procedure is to be applied to Germany and ultimately to Japan, heaven help us. We shall set up an arena in which the victors contend for the favor of the vanquished, and instead of settling the German problem, we shall surely and inevitably revive it.

A SEVERE test of his diplomacy will come fairly soon now: Is there to be an Italian treaty which provides a settlement around Trieste? The acid test will be whether the new frontier has to be guarded by British and American troops, or whether there is an agreement with Russia which entrusts the protection of that frontier to forces under the authority of the United Nations.

Let us hope for the best. But it is certainly setting our sights rather low when the best we can hope for as a result of a year of postwar diplomacy is that on one serious European frontier dispute we have achieved a dubious compromise and a precarious truce.

MUCH HAS BEEN said by American visitors abroad about how Mr. Byrnes has had to labor to convince Europe that the United States is not going to withdraw. My own observations abroad convinced me that the truly representative Europeans, who live in the present and not in the past, do not think we shall withdraw into isolation as in 1919. They know we cannot do that. What they are really concerned about is the consequences to them of the form of our participation in Europeon affairs.

For as Europeans see it, we are treating the continent as a diplomatic battlefield in a world-wide contest of power with the Soviet Union. Almost certainly the great majority of civilized Europeans prefer the United States to the Soviet Union. But we shall be misled if we think that they trust us confidently to lead them to peace or to prosperity. They are not happy over the manner in which we have chosen to arrange matters so that on every issue they have to stand up in public, and be counted as for us or for the Russians. The three Senators in Paris may think peace can be made as laws are enacted in the Senate—by roll calls, showdowns, and votes. But this procedure is a catastrophe for Europe, in that it compels the nations to take sides against one another, and drives deep wedges of division into their internal affairs.

THESE things cannot be said by Europeans, or at least they cannot be said explicitly. But that there is a European reaction against the treatment of Europe as the stake in a Soviet-American conflict is plain enough to those who will read the signs of the times. M. de Gaulle was the first of the great Europeans to give expression to it. Mr. Churchill, in a different form, has discerned the deep feeling of Europe, which now includes the United Kingdom, that Europe itself must arise and bring to an end the cataclysmic conflict which has developed between Moscow and Washington.

American Bases

By Merlo Pusey

One Source of Russia's Fears

HENRY WALLACE is gone from the Cabinet, but some of his advice lingers. The tragedy of Mr. Wallace was that he was not willing to express his viewpoint to the President and members of the Cabinet and let it go at that. President Truman was finally compelled to dismiss Mr. Wallace to extricate his Administration from an intolerable schism over foreign policy. But this does not mean that all of Mr. Wallace's ideas should go into the ash can.

PUSEY

If the Administration is alert to its responsibility, it will now seek to separate the wheat from the chaff in Mr. Wallace's advice. The most cogent point made by the former Secretary of Commerce, in my opinion, is that we are not doing all in our power to remove Russian suspicion of us. The fear-ridden Russians see in some of our actions aggressive threats to their security. Actually an overwhelming majority of the American people wish to live at peace with Russia and the danger of American aggression is nil. Common sense suggests, therefore, that we make every reasonable effort to get the Russians to see this.

One source of Russian distrust, as Mr. Wallace pointed out, is our interest in outlying bases. It seems to me that this is the chief legitimate reason for Moscow's fear complex, so far as this country is concerned. An impression has gone out that we are seeking to dominate most of the Atlantic as well as the Pacific.

Something has been done to allay Russian suspicions by our straightforward negotiations with Iceland for the return to Icelandic control of the wartime bases constructed on that island. Regardless of what our past wishes may have been, it is now clear that the United States intends to relinquish all rights as to the Keflavik area. We hope to continue using the airport, with the consent of Iceland, so long as we have occupation troops in Germany, but after that our interest in the base will be only that of a member of the United Nations working for the cause of world peace.

THE SOUNDNESS of this policy seems to me beyond question. We now have a powerful ring of bases for our protection in the Atlantic. American air squadrons can patrol the seas and spring to our defense from the tip of Greenland, from Newfoundland, Bermuda, various points in the West Indies and Trinidad just off the coast of South America. During the war we also had powerful bases in Brazil and other Latin-American countries, but these are now quite properly in the process of being turned over to the countries in which they are located. The arrangement as to the bases in Greenland is not permanent, but the present indication is that it will stand indefinitely. The bases on the various British islands are held under 99-year leases beginning in 1940.

Despite this formidable protection, there is continued talk of a permanent American base in the Azores, which, like Iceland, are much closer to Europe than to the United States. At present we retain in the Azores transit rights for our air traffic to Europe, and these may be reasonably continued, if Portugal consents, while we have occupation troops in Germany. But even the suspicion that the United States is seeking a permanent base in the Azores creates needless tension and gives our denial of any aggressive intent a hollow sound.

In the Pacific the gap between our peaceful intentions and our policy in claiming distant bases is still wider. We have strong points of what might be called a defensive character in the Aleutian Islands, Pearl Harbor and the Galapagos, although arrangements for future maintenance and use of the latter base remain to be worked out with Ecuador. In the Western Pacific, of course, we have formidable bases in Guam and the Philippines,—the latter now the subject of negotiations with the new Filipino government. Not satisfied with the great strength these bases give, our policy-makers are also apparently laying plans for exclusive control over bases in Okinawa and the islands formerly mandated to Japan.

It seems to me that a distinction ought to be drawn between bases on which we depend for defense of our own shores and for carrying out our national commitments and bases which are primarily valuable for the preservation of world peace. In other words, our interest in Pearl Harbor and Dutch Harbor is immediate and direct. Our interest in Okinawa, the Carolines and the Marianas is shared by all other peoples eager to preserve peace in the Far East.

IF WE SINCERELY believe in the Security Council as a world police agency, these bases and others of like character wrested from the enemy in the recent war ought to be brought under the council's supervision. If we are not willing to go that far, we inevitably undermine confidence in the peace system which we did so much to create. And we bolster suspicions that we might want bases for purposes other than preservation of the peace through collective action.

Secretary Byrnes' policy, as I understand it, is one of seeking cooperation and of standing rigidly against aggressive expansionism on the part of Russia or any other country. That sensible policy would be strengthened and not weakened by showing our own disposition to seek international solutions wherever international interests predominate.

It is a good time to remember that our leadership ought to run in the direction of curbing our own nationalistic ambitions as well as those of our former allies. After all, only the United States is strong enough and sufficiently free from fear to take the lead in this cause, and if we do so half-heartedly the hope of ever bridging over the differences between the Russians and ourselves will diminish accordingly.

Taking Stock

By Barnet Nover

After The Wallace Ouster

IN HIS VALEDICTORY statement as Secretary of Commerce, Henry A. Wallace found it necessary to clear up some points in his Madison Square Garden speech about which, he explained, "there has been widespread misunderstanding."

NOVER

He does not believe, said Mr. Wallace, in the division of the world into two camps. On the contrary, he has "continuously and wholeheartedly advocated the principles of living in one world."

He is against all types of imperialism, Russian as well as British or American. The regionalism he believes in (this, obviously, in explanation of his remarks regarding Russia's role in eastern Europe) is one that does not do violence to the "one world" concept and, moreover, takes into account the rights of small nations, just as they were taken into account in Roosevelt's good neighbor policy.

IT IS GOOD to have Mr. Wallace's clarification regarding these points, since his Madison Square Garden speech was sufficiently unclear regarding them to give rise to the very impressions which he now denies he ever intended to create.

But while he was at it, Mr. Wallace might have gone one step further and explained just what he meant by the punch line in his valedictory: "I intend to carry on the fight for peace."

Does he mean by that those whose attitude toward Russia differs from his own are not believers in peace and are not, in accordance with their lights, seeking to bring about such a regime? It is difficult to believe he means that, since in this same valedictory he stated that he did not want to do anything, despite the fact that his resignation had released him from his pledge to keep silent, "which might interfere with the success of the Paris Conference."

Since Mr. Wallace envisages the possibility of a successful outcome of the Paris Conference and since success at Paris would obviously be a step toward peace this remark would seem to indicate that he is not yet wholly persuaded that the road the Administration is taking is the road to war.

Yet that is precisely the impression which the Wallace valedictory as a whole (taken in connection with the Madison Square Garden speech) left on many hearers.

THE TROUBLE with this business of "fighting for peace," is that, at best, it is a meaningless cliche and at worst a dangerous deception.

Everybody wants peace and every nation and statesman in his own particular way is fighting for it, or insists he is. And that is not only true now. It was no less true in the past.

The late Neville Chamberlain waving a scrap of paper with Hitler's signature on it and declaring pathetically: "This means peace in our time" was in his own eyes a fighter for peace. No word was more frequently in the mouths of our isolationists than this same blessed word. Even Hitler was not loath to use it.

But there can be no peace without order. Indeed, the first is only the by-product of the second and cannot be anything else. If we have order we shall have peace. If we do not have order the peace we have is bound to be uneasy, unstable, subject to constant attrition and ultimate destruction.

THE REAL PROBLEM facing the world today, then, is not how to achieve peace but how to establish a viable order. If we achieve the second, we shall secure the first. That was the prime purpose of the conferences at Tehran, Cairo, Yalta, Potsdam, London and Paris. That is implicit in the establishment of the United Nations.

But there cannot be order if one nation insists on being a law unto itself, setting aside any treaty or agreement or pledge it has made whenever it suits the national interest to do so.

That is precisely the impression the world has come to have regarding the drift of Russian policy. And that is one basic reason for the growing tension between Russia and the other powers.

THERE CAN be little doubt that Russia, too, wants peace. We in this country suffer unnecessarily from a state of jitters regarding the threat of war from the direction of the USSR.

Nothing impressed me more on my recent trip to Europe than to find, in such a place as Berlin, where we are in direct contact with the Russians and are greatly outnumbered by them, that our military and civilian officials discount the theory that war is imminent. They ought to know.

But if Russia, like the United States, wants peace her conception of world order has thus far differed radically from ours. She has repeatedly ignored, evaded or deliberately torn up solemn agreements she has made with us. The record of her activities in eastern Europe, the Balkans, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Korea provides an extremely disturbing record of noncooperation and bad faith.

It is this circumstance that led the United States to adopt a policy of firmness toward Russia. And that policy is slowly beginning to make headway. If we hold the line, if the people back it up, we may get somewhere with it.

It will take time, a great deal of time, before real results become apparent. It is far too early to despair. The real defeatists—and in that respect the real warmongers—are those who do not believe that the United States is really strong or who doubt that we can use this strength for constructive purposes.

Leading Farmer Groups Plan To Draft United Front Program

By the Associated Press

Three of the Nation's major farmer organizations will meet at Buffalo October 2-5 in an attempt to compose differences and draft both international and domestic agricultural programs on which they can present a united front.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives yesterday confirmed fixing of the "peace" conference between their executive committees.

Only national conventions of the three organizations, however, can commit them to whatever program is drawn in Buffalo. All three conventions will take place prior to reconvening of Congress in January.

No. 1 on the agenda is "international agricultural problems." This will include discussion of the recent meeting of the United Nations' food and agricultural organization in Denmark and possible cooperation in the International Federation of Agricultural Producers, a nongovernmental organization founded in London.

Hope to Agree on U. S. Issues

Domestically the conference will seek "greater unanimity" on such problems as:

(1) Parity; (2) disposal of surpluses, including new uses and upgrading of diets; (3) support prices; (4) soil conservation; (5) farm credit; (6) rural health legislation; (7) labor legislation, and (8) the Federal tax program.

The Council of Cooperatives reported its executive committee will meet next week to survey its stand on various points.

Currently the Grange and Farm Bureau Federation, two of the most politically powerful organizations in the country, are divided on several major domestic issues.

The grange opposes the federation-sponsored Flanagan-Hill bill to establish a national fertilizer policy, insisting it would "put the Government in the fertilizer business for five years" giving selected demonstration farmers 100,000 tons annually through State extension services.

The Federation favors "coordination" of all agencies in the conservation field, including the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Farm Security Administration, Extension Service and AAA. The Grange contends this would "eliminate" the Soil Conservation Service and "place its farmer-operated program under extension services."

The Grange has clamored for "modernization" of the parity price formula, insisting it should be based upon consumer demands over the last five years. The Federation has favored continuation of 1910-14 as the parity base period.

They agree a system of international trade should be worked out so that surpluses will not be damned up in one sector of the globe while another starves.

Appeal Issued For Asylum Aides

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—Dr. GeorgeE. Preston, State mental hygiene commissioner, today made a plea for 400 men and women urgently needed as attendants in the State's five mental hospitals.

Dr. Kenneth B. Jones, superintendent of Springfield Hospital, reported meantime that 25 students, including 6 former servicemen, are taking a nine-month course in practical nursing in preparation for jobs there.

Students completing the course will be eligible for a base pay of $1475, which amounts to about $1800 a year with overtime.

Dr. Jones pointed out that employes get free meals, living quarters, uniforms, laundry, and old age benefits.

Power Strike Slated Today In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (AP).—Working feverishly under pressure of an impending power strike—the third to hit the Pittsburgh metropolitan area in seven months—city officials today made widespread precautions to protect the health and safety of 1,500,000 persons in the affected district.

The on-again, off-again strike of 3500 Duquesne Light Co. employes was set for 8:30 a. m. (EST) tomorrow by George L. Mueller, president of the Independent Association of employes of the Duquesne Light and Associated Companies.

Oddly, the start of the power shutdown would be signaled by a court hearing on a preliminary injunction forbidding the strike. The hearing is on permanency of a city-obtained injunction which quashed an hour-long power strike September 10.

3500 Ordered to Court

Law enforcement authorities were preparing for an uncertain problem at the hearing. The union ordered its entire 3500 members to court on grounds they were "all defendants." The courtroom holds only 200. Sheriff Walter C. Monaghan called upon the county's police forces to cooperate in maintaining order.

Thirty-seven Diesel power generator units, which the city returned only last week to the Army, were brought back again for distribution to hospitals, pumping stations, the incinerator plant and morgue. Swimming pools were filled with water and red lanterns readied for distribution at dangerous street intersections.

The Pittsburgh Railways Co. announced street car service to its million daily riders will be maintained through the morning peak rush hour until the strike deadline.

Judges Meet Secretly

Meanwhile, the possibility of further court action to stop the walkout was under discussion at a closed meeting of Common Pleas Court judges. Mayor David L. Lawrence, who worked as voluntary mediator in an effort to head off the strike, said resignedly:

"It's now in the hands of the courts."

The dispute leading up to the threatened strike is over a union demand for a 20 per cent wage increase, raising base pay from $1.18 to $1.41 hourly, a master contract for nine companies, profitsharing and other benefits. The union membership rejected arbitration by a 4 to 1 vote last week.

A 19-hour power strike last February crippled industry and transportation. The dispute was later settled by an arbitration award of an 18½-cent-hourly pay increase.

More Killed, Woumded as Indians Riot

New Delhi, Sept. 23 (AP).—Seven deaths and scores of stabbing and bludgeoning casualties were reported in India today as new Hindu-Moslem violence flared.

In rioting in Calcutta, three persons were killed and more than 50 wounded. Four persons were killed and 12 injured in riots at Jammu, in northern Kashmir.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru asked to be relieved as president of the All-India Congress in order better to carry out his new duties as leading minister in India's interim government.

Tension was mounting in sections of Calcutta where 3000 persons were killed in rioting last month.

At Poona, where the Bombay Legislature was in session, a bill givnig police sweeping powers to put down communal hooliganism won approval on third readnig, but walked out in protest.

"Incident in the Temple"

. . an original radio drama that pays tribute to the memory of a little known hero of the American Revolution

"Incident in the Temple," brought to you tonight at 7:30 p. m. by WINX and WINX-FM (Frequency Modulation), is a dramatization of the contribution made to the American Revolution by Haym Salomon, an unsung hero of the War of 1776. Salomon was a Jewish patriot through whose tireless efforts George Washington was able to obtain the funds he so sorely needed to finance our fight for Independence.

This original radio drama by the young writer-director Sol Panits is presented as the third in a series of half-hour radio dramatizations written to promote understanding and fellowship between peoples and to bring into sharp focus the background of liberty inherent in our history. Tonight's program is particularly appropriate in that Rosh Hashonah, the Jewish New Year, begins tomorrow at sundown.

Productivity Rise Predicted by BLS

Increase in Industrial Output Seen Due To Production Methods, New Machines

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Bureau of Labor Statistics is forecasting an "extremely rapid" increase in productivity—the output per man-hour of work—in America's manufacturing industries in the next few years, it was learned yesterday.

The bureau's hopeful conclusions not all of which have been made public, are the result of continued studies by its economists who are specialists in productivity.

They believe from their investigations, they indicated yesterday, that the normal increase in productivity at the rate of about 3 per cent a year since the turn of the century, will be resumed in the postwar period.

Further, they forecast that in the immediate future period there will be a more than "normal" jupm to make up for the war years, during which there was either a leveling off or even a slight decline in worker output.

Individual Efficiency Secondary

The major facorts in changes of productivity are considered to be the production methods and the quality and efficiency of machines and equipment. The efficiency of the individual worker is not thought to be the most signficant element.

The anitcipated increase in output per man-hour in manufacturing industries is partly based on Commerce Department studies showing phenomenally large investments since the end of the war—and plans for continuing this rate of investment—in new equipment.

Much of this equipment will be superior to that in use before the war, and even if it is not, it represents a raise in the average quality of all machines. Accordingly, it will permit a substantial increase in man-hour output, the BLS economists believe.

The present rate of investment in new equipment is three times as high as that in 1939 and substantially larger than in 1941 when new equipment buying was already abnormally large because of the requirements of the defense program.

Auto Productivity Rise Seen

The greatest productivity increase is expected for those industries which were not able to add much new equipment during the war and in those industries which were converted to war production.

These include automobiles, machinery, electrical equipment, textiles, clothing, leather, paper and printing.

During the war, the BLS studies show, productivity in munitions industries rose enormously as mass production methods were applied and as increasing amounts of machinery were installed in fields—such as airplanes—which had hitherto been mostly "tailor-made" operations.

Of non-munitions industries, which made more or less the same product during the war as before, the BLS has been able to compile statistics on 32. These employ about one-third of all workers in manufacturing industries.

Record Spotty During War

Their productivity record was spotty during the war, but generally, they did not continue the customary three per cent annual productivity improvement. For the most part, their output per man hour turned downward from 1941 to 1943, levelled off in 1944 and increased in 1945.

Such figures as are available, the BLS says, show that in the first part of 1946 productivity was better than in the corresponding period of 1945.

In most industries, Bureau economists find a close correlation between volume of production and productivity. That is, output per man-hour increases with higher volume, falls off with lower production. Consequently, it is felt that as production of civilian goods increases in volume in the next few years, the man-hour output will also rise.

Smaller Volume a Faction

By the same reasoning, one explanation for the declines in civilian industry productivity during the war was their smaller volume of business. Another was their inability to obtain the normal replacements and improvements in equipment. A third was the loss of skilled labor, foremen and managers to munitions industries.

The BLS' findings, which may receive full publication in further formal reports, contrast rather sharply with opinions held in industrial quarters.

For example, BLS economists state categorically that it is impossible to say, or to measure, whether physical production per man-hour increased or dropped in industries which converted to war production.

Officials of most of those industries, however, insist that productivity declined.

Industrial Opinion Differs

Second, the BLS conclusion that the worker's individual efficiency or effort is a relatively small factor in the whole productivity picture is at variance with general industrial opinion. Most business leaders have been inclined to attribute a large degree of the present low productivity in many factories and industries to an alleged "slowing-down" by labor.

Third, BLS experts agree that wage payments per unit of output rose during the war, owing to higher hourly rates not fully compensated for by productivity increases. But they do not feel that these increases in "unit labor cost" ovrebalanced the price increases which took place in the war period.

This conclusion, they say, is supported by the substantial profits which all branches of war industry showed during the war pediod.

in the birth rate about five years ago, school heads explained.

About 800 of the 1364 veterans who reported to Central High School's veteran's center for program information yesterday were instructed ot return for opening of classes omorrow. The rest, who had not enrolled as early as the others, were informed by the center director, Robert Vanderlip, that every effort was being made to find more teachers and space in order to begin additional classes Thursday.

Eagerness of the veterans to get in on an accelerated high school training program was summed up yesterday by Earl (Tiny) Hill, 20, of 1405 Harvard st. nw., who is asking to start the program this fall.

"We're not kids and more and we want to get our high school work over with as quickly as possible and start college," said Hill, who left Central as a junior two years ago to serve in the Navy.

No Unusual Tardiness

School officials reported no unusual tardiness yesterday as a result of the new 9 a. m. opening hour for junior and senior high schools. Capital Transit officials, who opposed the end of the wartime 9:30 a. m. opening, said streetcars and buses were more crowded than ever during the morning rush hour, as they had predicted, but that otherwise "everything went off all right."

The company had warned that it could not find manpowes to put on extra cars needed if school children were added to the rush-hour traffic.

Enrollment figures yesterday were phoned to school statisticians by school principals and may be somewhat higher when final written reports are turned in today. A breakdown of the tentative enrollment, which includes 47,732 white children and 40,496 Negroes, follows:

Teachers colleges	463	706
Senior high	12,423	15,291
Vocational high	914	1,270
Junior high	17,229	18,574
Elementary schools	42,688	48,151

A Census Bureau report yesterday estimated that school enrollment throughout the Nation this fall will total 24 million children between the ages of 6 and 17.

The Chevy Chase, Md., fire department was called out to extricate Thiede. Acetylene torches and crowbars were needed to cut off one of the doors of the car to get at the injured man. He was taken to Suburban Hospital, suffering head and internal injuries.

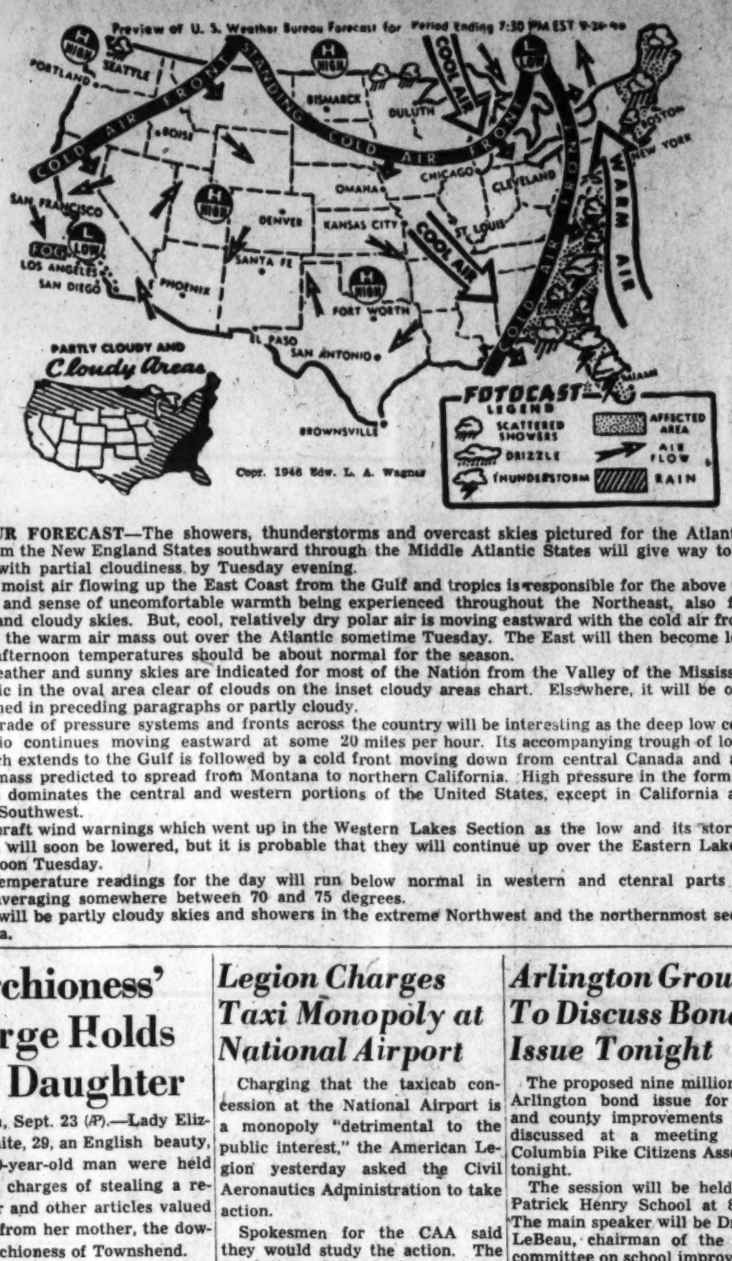

Montgomery County Policemen Paul Alexander and Robert Kuster, investigating the crash, arrested the truck driver, Joseph Ellis, 37, of 934 L st. nw., on a charge of reckless driving. He was later released under $200 bond pending outcome of Thiede's injuries.

Police said Thiede was visiting with a brother at 8426 Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Carroll C. Moore, 46, of 13A M st. sew., was ordered held for action of the grand jury by Coroner A. National Weather Summary

24-HOUR FORECAST—The showers, thunderstorms and overcast skies pictured for the Atlantic seaboard from the New England States southward through the Middle Atlantic States will give way to cooler weather with partial cloudiness by Tuesday evening.

Warm, moist air flowing up the East Coast from the Gulf and tropics is responsible for the above normal humidity and sense of uncomfortable warmth being experienced throughout the Northeast, also for the showers and cloudy skies. But, cool, relatively dry polar air is moving eastward with the cold air front and will push the warm air mass out over the Atlantic sometime Tuesday. The East will then become less sultry and afternoon temperatures should be about normal for the season.

Fair weather and sunny skies are indicated for most of the Nation from the Valley of the Mississippi to the Pacific in the oval area clear of clouds on the inset cloudy areas chart. Elsewhere, it will be overcast as centioned in preceding paragraphs or partly cloudy.

The parade of pressure systems and fronts across the country will be interesting as the deep low centered in Ontario continues moving eastward at some 20 miles per hour. Its accompanying trough of low pressure which extends to the Gulf is followed by a cold front moving down from central Canada and another cold air mass predicted to spread from Montana to northern California. High pressure in the form of several cells dominates the central and western portions of the United States, except in California and the extreme Southwest.

Small craft wind warnings which went up in the Western Lakes Section as the low and its storm area moved in will soon be lowered, but it is probable that they will continue up over the Eastern Lakes until at least noon Tuesday.

High temperature readings for the day will run below normal in western and ctenral parts of the Nation, averaging somewhere between 70 and 75 degrees.

There will be partly cloudy skies and showers in the extreme Northwest and the northernmost section of Minnesota.

Marchioness' Charge Holds Her Daughter

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Lady Elizabeth White, 29, an English beauty, and a 40-year-old man were held today on charges of stealing a refrigerator and other articles valued at $2000 from her mother, the dowager marchioness of Townshend.

The case caused a great hubbub. A request by the marchioness that the charges be dropped was denied by Magistrate Paul Bennett. He adjourned the case for two weeks.

Lady White's codefendant was identified as Paul Anthony Walsh. "No occupation and no fixed address."

Police Constable George Slee testified that Lady White said "Yes, I took the bloody things."

French asked why, and Mollison told of the Hallicrafters firm selling the radio trucks last year for about $3300 less than they were worth, a loss on 200 trucks of more than half a million dollars.

Mollison said the company had no right to sell for these prices, but that early this year a letter of authority was found in the WAA files.

Letter Predate Agency

The letter, hesaid, was on WAA stationary, but the sale that it authorized took place before the WAA was set up. He said he would bring the letter down to the committee to be placed in evidence today.

The Hallicrafters firm, Mollison added, will not be selling surplus after October 31, because he has cancelled its contract.

Mollison said he has frozen shipments of goods to all other agents because of other shady practices.

When he starts these shipments again, he said, he hopes to have new contracts holding the agents to commissions of 35 per cent on their sales, with them paying all costs. There have been cases, he said, when the cost has been as high as 65 per cent and there was one lot of crystals sold for $200 at a handling cost of over $14,000.

Legion Charges Taxi Monopoly at National Airport

Charging that the taxicab concession at the National Airport is a monopoly "detrimental to the public interest," the American Legion yesterday asked the Civil Aeronautics Administration to take action.

Spokesmen for the CAA said they would study the action. The resolution of the legion was also sent to the Public Utilities Commission, where, it was said, the matter would be taken up at the regular Thursday meeting.

The National Airport has a contract until 1950 with Air Transport, Inc., for taxicab service to Washington. District cabs cannot pick up passengers at the airport. More than 60 per cent of the local hackers are veterans, it was estimated.

CCC Chief Sihelds Resigns to Join Beet Sugar Group

The Agriculture Department yesterday announced the resignation of Robert H. Shields as administrator of its Production and Marketing Administration and as president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Shields will enter private industry as executive vice president and general counsel of the United States Beet Sugar Association.

The department said Shields' successor has not been chosen.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said it was "another case where a rigid and inadequate salary scale is costing the Government a top man who will be very hard to replace."

Shields is a native of Nebraska and a former solicitor of the Agriculture Department.

Arlington Group To Discuss Bond Issue Tonight

The proposed nine million dollar Arlington bond issue for school and county improvements will be discussed at a meeting of the Columbia Pike Citizens Association tonight.

The session will be held at the Patrick Henry School at 8 p. m. The main speaker will be Dr. Oscar LeBeau, chairman of the citizens committee on school improvements, who proposed the allocation of three million dollars for bettering school conditions.

Paul Hill, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said his group has failed to find any definite opposition to the bond issue proposal of the joint subcommittee of the School Board and County Board.

Big 4 Ministers Meet Today on Treaty Delays

Paris, Sept. 23 (AP).—President Georges Bidault of France today called a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers for tomorrow afternoon to attempt to iron out differences in proposed treaty amendments and pave the way for adjournment of the 21-nation peace conference by October 15.

In the conference itself, the United States abandoned a stand taken with Britain and France and aligned herself with Russia in advocating partial payment for property losses to Allied nationals in Romania. Previously the three western powers had insisted on full payment for such losses.

In other conference developments today the Italians asked that Libya, Eritrea and Italian Somaliland be placed under Italian trusteeship, the United States reitcrated opposition to approving in a treaty the forced transfer of 200,000 Hungarians from Czechoslavakia and Greece demanded that the Bulgarians be compelled to destroy fortifications on the Greek-Bulgarian frontier.

Members of the 21-nation parley are anxious to adjourn by October 15 so that delegates may have ample time to journey to Lake Success, N. Y., for the opening of the United Nations General Assembly October 23.

The United States action in giving up demands for 100 per cent compnesation from Romania was similar to that taken last Thursday by both France and the United States in regard to Italy. The shift from complete to partial compensation from Italy was hailed at that time by a Soviet delegate as a "pleasant surprise."

There were indications that the United States also would agree to only partial compensation from Bulgaria and Hungary, but Britain was reported adamant in favor of 100 per cent compnesation.

Farve Islands Chiefs Favor Independence

Copenhagen, Sept. 23 (INS).—Reports from the Faroe Islands said tonight the local Council had voted 12 to 11 to declare the islands independent of Denmark.

NATIONS

Australia to the surprise proposal Gromyko made last month.

He said President Truman and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes had promised that United States troops would be withdrawn from China after Japanese troops had been disarmed and sent home or as soon as the Chinese government was able ot perform these functions.

He said repatriation of the Japanese was about completed by the end of June, "three months ago," and he charged that the repatriation was only a screen "to cover the real aim for keeping these troops in China."

Proposition Called 'Propaganda'

Gromyko, looking directly at the American and British delegates, said "We hear more and more voices of protest" against the presence of U. S. and British troops in hina, India, Iraq, Egypt, Iceland, Indonesia, Greece and Latin American countries.

He called attention to United States troops in Panama and South America and said this naturally "caused anxiety." He said information from Brazil indicated "anxiety" there too.

Gromyko spoke after Sir Alexander Cadogan, of Britain, and Herschel V. Johnson, of the United States, declared their strong opposition to his request that the question, which Gromyko described as a "situation" under the U. N. charter, be put on the council's work sheet.

Australia indicated opposition to it also but Poland backed up the Russian delegate.

Cadogan attacked the proposition as "pure propaganda" and said his government considered Russia's action as "irresponsible." Cadogan added he was confident that the "world would see through this transparent political maneuver."

U. S. Rejects Charge

Johnson retorted that United States troops were on foreign friendly territory on the basis of agreements with their governments. Johnson further said their presence had not contributed to uneasiness in the world.

Johnson declared the U. S. Government could see no "practical reason" for considering the case.

The Council thus was embarked upon what Dr. Oscar Lange, Polish delegate, said had become a "very bad habit of discussing the merits of a case where the question was merely one of admitting an item to the agenda."

The parliamentary situation is that Russia has asked that her proposition be put on the agenda but the delegates appear to be going into the case thoroughly before even deciding whether to consider it formally.

Mother of 3 Held Under Bond on Bigamy Charge

Mrs. Blanche C. Morgal, 27-year-old mother of three children, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of bigamy.

Mrs. Morgal, who lives with her children at 1003 30th st. se., was freed under $500 bond by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage after she waived preliminary hearing. The complainant in the case, police said, is her second husband, Aubrey A. King, 26-year-old Navy veteran who, police said, met Mrs. Morgal while he was in the service and married here last year.

The first marriage, to John W. Morgal, jr., 28, a plumber, occurred in 1940, police said, and from this marriage she had the children.

Germans to Eat Better

Berlin, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A 200-calorie increase in basic German food rations, boosting the daily total for the normal consumer to 1550 calories, will take effect in the American and British occupied zones in Germany on October 14, it was announced today.

Drunken Pedestrians Often Get Struck

Columbus, Ohio, (U.P.). — The drunken pedestrian, who supposedly weaves through traffic and never gets hit, actually leads no more charmed life than the drunken driver, a State Highway Department analysis of 1945 accidents showed today.

One third of the pedestrians killed in 101 fatal pedestrian accidents on Ohio's rural highways last year had been drinking just before their deaths. One fourth of the pedestrians hurt in the 216 nonfatal pedestrian accidents had been drinking.

SAYS GOODBYE TO CONSTIPATION

Famous Cereal Ends Lifetime Of Dosing

Do you suffer from constipation? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I can truthfully say that I have been more or less constipated all my life and have taken most all kinds of harsh laxatives. But four months ago I began eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I eat a dish of ALL-BRAN every morning, and have a nice easy passage every day. I am now 74 years old." A. A. Schaeffer, 3736 S. E. 32nd Ave., Portland, Oregon.

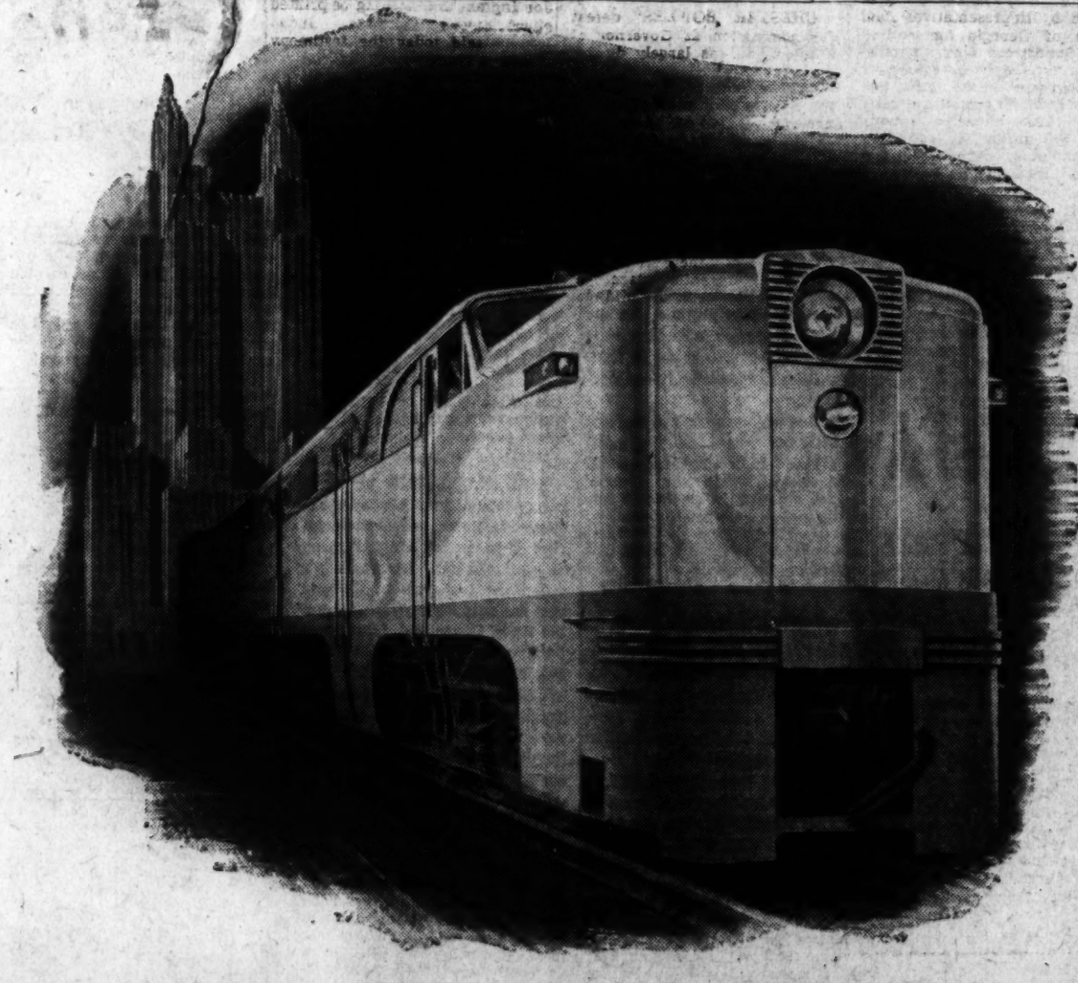

If you suffer from constipation due to lack of bulk in your diet, you may be free from this trouble for the rest of your life if you will eat a dish of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, and drink plenty of water. Try this for 10 days, and if not completely satisfied, send the empty carton to Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan. You'll get double your money back.

ALL-BRAN is not a purgative, but a wholesome cereal made of the vital outer layers of finest wheat. Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day as a delicious cereal, or in muffins.

A Locomotive at the Waldorf

TRANSPORTATION history is being made today at the Waldorf-Astoria. On the hotel's Private Siding a 6000-horsepower diesel-electric locomotive of significant new design will make its debut to the railroad and business world.

This is the first of a new line of passenger locomotives which shortly will go into service on the crack streamline trains of the Santa Fe Railroad.

These super-locomotives offer the American railroads a new solution to their key problem as they move into a period of vigorous, resourceful competition—the problem of providing the finest transportation for the lowest possible cost.

This is the mightiest of an entirely new line of mass-produced diesel-electric passenger and freight locomotives and switchers built by two great engineering firms, American Locomotive and the General Electric Company. From American Locomotive come the 16 cylinder V-type diesel engines which pack more power into less weight than any other locomotives on the rails. From General Electric come the war-born superchargers and new electrical equipment.

This is the 75,000th locomotive produced in more than a century by American Locomotive, builder of more locomotives than any other manufacturer in the world.

This is a proud day on the Private Siding of the Waldorf—proud for the builders of a new champion—proud for the Santa Fe Railroad which has a new technological triumph to offer its passengers between Chicago and the West.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ALMOST every morning housewives wake up to complain about a new price increase authorized by Paul Porter and OPA It has been one long, monotonous series of boosts in the cost of living.

What most people don't understand, however, is that Porter and his OPA have no choice in the matter. The price boosts are required by law—by the new polyglot OPA Act lobbied through Congress last summer. If he wanted to play politics, Porter could easily couple with each announcement of a price increase a statement as to what Senator was responsible for costing housewives all the extra money.

If he did, the public would get a graphic picture of how, when different lobbies throughout the United States of America all start grabbing theirs, very little is left for the poor public.

Here is the roll call of Congressmen who forced up prices and the estimate of how much each is costing the American people:

Calling OPA Roll

AMENDMENT by Senator Kenneth Wherry, Nebraska Republican—Prohibits OPA from requiring cost absorption by wholesalers and retailers after March 31, 1946. This adds 350 million dollars to the housewives' budget.

Amendment by Representative Fred Crawford, Michigan Republican—Prohibits cost absorption for automobile dealers. Cost to public—425 million dollars.

Amendment by Representative John Flannagan, Virginia Democrat—Supported by Representative Jesse Wolcott and Senator Taft, Michigan and Ohio Republicans, cutting food subsidies in half. This will cost consumers the huge total of $1,500,000,000 on their food bill. (Flannagan bows to the farm lobby.)

Amendment by Senator Abe Murdock, Utah Democrat (he listens to the beet sugar lobby)—forbids the Commodity Credit Corporation from absorbing an increase in the price paid for Cuban sugar over 3.675 cents per pound. This adds 2 cents per pound to consumer's sugar bill—total: 200 million dollars.

Amendment by Representative Frank Sundstrom, New Jersey Republican (he is close to the manufacturers, lobby)—prohibits OPA from using its maximum average price regulation. Thus OPA was powerless to insist that manufacturers continue to turn out low-cost clothing at low cost, with the Nation-wide consumer clothing bill raised by at least 10 per cent, or $1,200,000,000.

Cotton Lobby Operates

AMENDMENT BY THE LATE Senator John Bankhead, later pushed by Representatives Paul Brown of Georgia (on cotton) and Sundstrom (on wool)—forcing consumer absorption of price increases in the cotton and wool market. The price increase, at mill level alone, is already above 600 million dollars.

Amendment introduced by Senator Ernest McFarland, Arizona Democrat—decontrolling dairy products. Cost to consumer—$1,250,000,000.

Amendment to McFarland amendment proposed by Senator George Radcliffe, lame-duck Maryland Democrat and spokesman for the poultry lobby—Decontrols poultry. Cost to consumer is dependent upon future action of poultry market and whether or not poultry is recontrolled. At present price levels, annual cost to consumer is about 150 million dollars above price increases which would otherwise have been granted by OPA.

Amendment decontrolling petroleum, sponsored by Oil King Senator Ed. Moore, Oklahoma Democrat, Lee O'Daniel, Texas Democrat, and other oil State Congressmen. Annual cost to consumers—about 750 million dollars.

Amendment prohibiting cost absorption at dealer level on farm machinery by Senator J. William Fulbright, Arkansas Democrat. This results in increased costs to farmers of 60 million dollars.

No reliable estimates are yet available on other amendments, such as that by Senator Clyde Hoey, North Carolina Democrat, decontrolling tobacco, or that originally proposed by Senator Wherry, decontrolling meat.

Cost to the Nation of the watered-down version of Senator Taft's assured-profit amendment cannot yet be estimated. No price increases under this amendment, assuring all businessmen of percentage profits as great as in the early war years, have yet been granted by OPA because of the heavy paper work involved.

Note: Many businessmen have already decided not to apply for these increases because they are unwilling to produce their books for OPA inspection.

Paul Porter's Slogan

WHEN you are boss of anything as unpopular as the OPA, you need a sense of humor. Fortunately, tall, gangling Kentucky-raised Paul Porter has one.

Some time ago he was attending a dinner given by Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson in honor of Herbert Morrison, a leader of the British Labor government. During the dinner, Morrison turned to John Snyder and said:

"I've come over here to find out how the American Government operates. Won't you be good enough to tell me about the duties of your department?"

Snyder obliged with a dry and factual resume of his duties. Then Morrison asked the same question of Paul Porter.

"Well, you see, over here, Mr. Minister," replied the OPA boss, "we operate the Government on slogans. Mine goes back to the War of 1812.

"You wouldn't remember much about that, but our hero in that war was old Hickory Jackson; and in the Battle of New Orleans when the Redcoats were battering away at our cotton bales, Jackson ordered his men:

"'Elevate them guns a little lower.'

"That's my slogan and my job, Mr. Minister," concluded Porter.

"I elevate them prices a little lower."

Merry-Go-Round

CHESTER BOWLES' defeat for nomination as Governor of Connecticut was largely due to Senator Brien McMahon's lukewarm support. McMahon voted for Bowles, but wouldn't go out beat the bushes for votes. Result: The Democrats are sure to lose Connecticut in November... Secretary of War Patterson spends two hours a week attending lectures on atomic energy—along with other War Department officers . . . It is strongly suspected that there is a little politics in the beef shortage. The big cattle ranchers, the Midwest feedlot fatteners and the meat packers are stanch Republicans, and if meat doesn't go to market for the next few weeks, the psychological effect on the November elections will be important—perhaps decisive.

Defense's Bias Charge False, SaSys Riot Trial Prosecutor

Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Sept. 23. (U.P.)—The prosecutor in the Columbia race trials said today charges by the attorney for the 25 Negro defendants that Southern newspapers were printing no testimony favorable to the defenses "follow the general pattern of falsehood that has been developed by agitators since the trouble started in February."

Defense Counsel Leon A. Ransom had charged in Washington Sunday that the newspapers followed recommendations by Judge Joe Ingram that nothing be printed about certain testimony. Judge Ingram said today the testimony cited by Ransom was cross-examination by the defense of a former Columbia sheriff about a white crowd which gathered before the Columbia jail prior to the wounding of four policemen in Mink Slide, a Negro district.

Prosecutor Protested

The prosecutor, Paul Bumpus, protested letting the jury hear this testimony on grounds it was not relevant to the case on trial and might make selection of juries difficult for other trials to be held in Columbia. Ingram said he excused the jury and heard the testimony himself.

The judge, commenting on Ransom's charges, said he asked reporters to "disregard" that testimony, "not to mention it in detail because it involves other indictments now pending in Columbia."

The "other trials" include those of Negroes, and two white men, indicted in connection with the late February racial disorder in Columbia.

Lee Andrew Shires, Negro witness currently testifying in the trials, told of seeing about a dozen guns stacked in a shoe shop in the Negro business section and of seeing 10 of the defendants armed with guns roaming through Mink Slide shortly before four Columbia patrolmen were shot there.

Struck By Policeman

Shires, who was arrested but later released after the disturbance, admitted he took a rifle to Mink Slide from his home but declared he left it in a church. When he was arrested, Shires testified, a State Patrolman blackjacked him.

On cross-examination by Maurice Weaver, only white attorney defending the Negroes, Shires said on the morning following the disturbance, "cars were coming through there (Mink Slide) shooting in the Negro section." He said a State Guardsman "hit my brother and he hit me and he hit a guy behind me and knocked him out."

Weaver then interjected that "two men were murdered in the jail" but Bumpus declared "there's not a word of truth in that—two men committed suicide in jail."

Shires continued: "We didn't have a chance to find out what we were being held for. They wouldn't let no one come to see us."

Young Wife Up For Trial in Mate's Slaying

A 21-year-old mother accused of murdering her husband goes on trial before a jury in Alexandria Corporation Court tomorrow at 10 a. m.

She is Mrs. Cleo Kincheloe, indicted for murder two weeks ago in the death of her husband, Charles, who was fatally wounded following an altercation on July 20 in a house boat the couple occupied on Hunting Creek near Route 1. She is the mother of two children by a previous marriage.

According to Alexandria police, Kincheloe was shot in the head with a small-gauge shotgun as he lay asleep in the houseboat shortly after the couple had quarreled violently. Prior to the shooting, Mrs. Kincheloe told police, her husband had struck her with a glass dish.

Kincheloe was slain only a short while after his wife had posted bond to secure his release from the Alexandria jail, where he had been held on a disorderly conduct charge resulting from a street fight the previous night.

Twenty-three Alexandria residents have been summoned to report for duty in connection with the trial. They are Philip Evans, Ferle Fuller, Archie R. Fair, H. H. Cable, Donald B. Eddy, William H. Skinner, jr., James W. Duty, Arthur B. Holmes, Martin E. Greene, Lee L. Carling, Grafton L. Cockey, H. H. Garland, Julian Downey, F. L. Norton, William M. Glasgow, J. T. Janney, C. C. Lamond, jr., Charles T. Leef, William A. Hulfish, Aubrey C. Clarke, William L. Lipps and Ward Boswell.

4-H Farm, Home Fair Will Open Oct. 3

Winchester, Va., Sept. 23 (Spl.). More than $100 in prizes will be awarded winning exhibits at the Frederick County 4-H farm and home fair on October 3 and 4, Miss Agnes Shirley, home demonstration agent, announced today.

Gasland Gather has been named superintendent with Roxanne Rogers acting as assistant. Judges will be Raymond Hoover, assistant agent at Woodstock; J. C. Gordon, vocational agriculture teacher at Stephens City; W. R. Legge, district supervisor of vocational agriculture, Winchester; Miss Margaret Yowell, home agent at Berryville, and Miss Elizabeth Otey, home agent at Woodstock.

Chest Drive Mapped

Winchester, Va., Sept. 23.—William Battaile has bee named campaign chairman and a goal of 30,000 set for the first annual Winchester-Frederick County Community Chest drive opening here November 1.

Gypsies Mourn Dead Queen in Ancient Rites

Philadelphia, Sept. 23 (AP).—A hundred wailing, unwashed women and chanting, unshaven men today held centuries-old funeral services for their dead gypsy queen.

For two hours, the gypsies visited St. Andrews' Russian Orthodox Church where lay in state the body of Mrs. Marta Evans, wife of George Evans, king of the Evans tribe. The mourners dropped coins into the casket. The queen, whose headquarters was in Harrisburg, Pa., died Saturday here.

The gypsies wore tattered, old clothes, but Mrs. Evans' body was clad in a gold-embroidered red satin gown, decked with a necklace of old gold coins and the star-shaped brooch which symbolized her tribal queenhood.

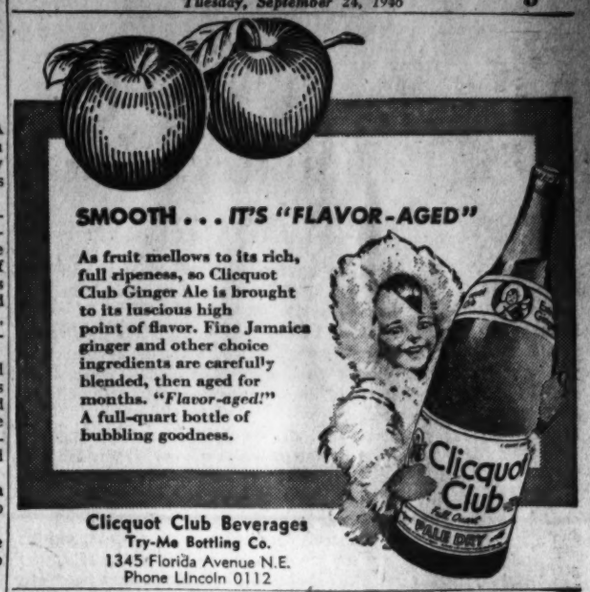

On the edge of the coffin was a clock face, the hands pointing to 8:50—the time she died.

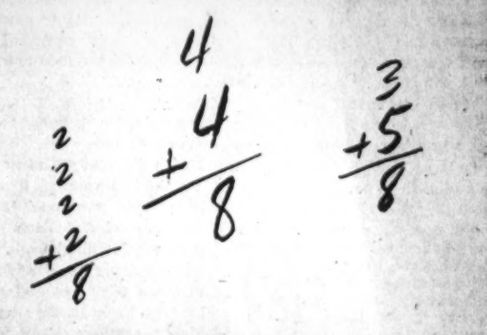

According to ancient law, none of the mourners were permitted to use soap.

Escaped Show Monkey Trapped in Cellar

Winchester, Va., Sept. 23 (Spl.). A monkey that escaped from the Penn Premier Shows playing here was trapped by police in the basement of the residence of Mrs. Anna Russell.

The small animal, loose for two nights and a day, brought a flood of complaints to police headquarters who treed the monkey twice but couldn't nab him.

New Fireboat To Arrive Today From Norfolk

Washington's new fireboat, the ex-Navy tug Mauquianna, is expected to arrive at its new waterfront headquarters here about noon today.

The 114-foot vessel, manned by a Fire Department crew under Seventh Battalion Chief John Werheim, pulled out of Norfolk at 2:27 p. m. yesterday, District fire officials reported.

It is expected to dock at the Coast Guard Pier, Maine ave. between 6th and 7th sts. sw. near the District's 46-year-old fireboat "Firefighter" which it will replace.

The Navy gave the boat to the District under authorization of a special Act of Congress authorizing the transfer.

City Police Refuse To Aid Fire Chasers

Winchester, Va., Sept. 23 (Spl.). Police Chief C. W. Hollis announced today that officers will no longer give out the information when citizens telephone for the location of fires.

He said that often as many as 70 telephone calls pour into headquarters when a fire alarm sounds, tying up phone facilities so that official business cannot be carried on by telephone.

Also, Hollis pointed out, firemen have recently installed a coded alarm system which fixes the location of any fire within a block and can be interpreted by the public.

They're Heavy on History

Movie Critics Fed Up With Psychiatry, Sour Musicals, Whodunits

SINCE REVIEWING FILMS often has all the effect of hollering down a well, it will be interesting to see what, if anything, comes of the poll results just announced by The Film Daily.

Under the high-flown title of Critics' Forum, the trade publication has queried newspaper and magazine reviewers, as it does every year, on the state of the cinema. Here are some of the critical thoughts the poll unwrapped.

Gloria Swanson

Psychological themes got the roughest handling of subject matter by the observers. It was felt that there are too many of these, although 61 per cent were in favor of such themes so long as they are well done and produced in moderation.

Poor musicals, murders, mystery and gangster films are too numerous, according to the crix, who suggest that what the country's screens need are more historical stories and biographies.

Then there's the inevitable question: "Do you believe that the commercial motion picture theater is the proper medium for the presentation of pictures whose content, political, social or economic, is controversial?" To this 44 per cent said yes, 56 per cent said no.

Brought down to earth, this means that most commentators do not think the theater should be used as a soapbox.

Powerful Interests Feared

Their reasoning for caution on this was generally specified. Some wrote that they feared both sides of a question would not be presented or that powerful interests would use the screen to promote their own projects. Others felt that we have been saturated with such films during the war and that audiences are tired of such preachings. Another group held that "theaters are the place for nonthought provoking entertainment," whatever that might be.

While it was generally agreed that there is little danger of further State and municipal censorship, the greatest majority in the poll—88 per cent—noted that criticism of some pictures is caused by misleading advertisements. Audiences, they felt, are drawn to certain pictures by ads which do not give a true idea of the films they purport to describe.

There is another close division on the popularity of foreign films. Improvement in British films, plus familiarity with them through the trade agreements fostered by both countries, led 53 per cent of the reviewers to feel that foreign pictures will be welcomed, but the 47 per cent against imports into this country indicates there is still a marked feeling of isolationism and sectionalism in the 48 States.

As a gauge of what the commentators are thinking—and will be leading their readers to think—the poll is provocative indeed. But what the results will be only the Atomic Age knows.

Yes, that was Gloria Swanson atop those heels that went clicking across the Statler lobby yesterday. It could have been no one else, to be sure, for when Gloria's face was becoming known the Hollywood maskmakers hadn't become so triumphant in making everyone look like everyone else. Gloria was in town waiting for the rain to stop. She's driving to Florida for a rest, but after that taxi accident in New York 10 days ago she's highly cautious about slippery roads. During her 10 days in the sun—and away from the telephone—she'll decide on one of the scripts she has with her. She hopes her choice will be a drama, not a comedy, "because then when the audience is quiet, you're not worrying about the laughs not getting over."

IN BRIEF: Tryouts tonight and tomorrow night for the Alexandria Little Theater's "You Can't Take It With You." The time is 8 o'clock, the place the Virginia Electric Service Co. Auditorium, Alexandria. Howard Wentworth is the director and wants nine men and seven women . . . The Earle still is plugging for "would-be-Western-glamor-gals" who look like Evelyn Keyes, the slick-haired chick of "Renegades." Write the "Renegades" contest editor at station WOL . . . Beatrice Lillie comes back again in "On Approval" today at the Pix for a three-day run . . . William Wells, UNRRA film chief just back from Europe, will talk on "What Is Happening on the International Film Front and Why" at the Washington Visual Workers luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 at Bonat's. For reservations phone Mrs. Jarnagin, RE. 4142, Ext. 6073.

HEDDA HOPPER

Two Oscars in One

Hollywood, Sept. 23.—Charles Rogers' "Angel On My Shoulder" is one of the first pictures of the year, with Paul Muni and Claude Rains giving Academy caliber performances. To me it's the best thing Muni's ever done . . . If the jurisdictional strikes throughout the country are ended, American industry can thank two actors: Bob Montgomery and George Murphy. Montgomery was one of the leading lights of the Screen Actors' Guild when actors needed help after producers arbitrarily cut in half every salary above $50 a week. Actors agreed to the cut for eight weeks only. So when Montgomery says it's unfair for 300 to throw 30,000 people out of work because of a jurisdictional strike he knows what he's talking about. Here's one GI I take my highest hat off to. He's good looking, has a fine voice. One of our major studios tested and liked him. But while waiting to be signed he got a job on the Beverly Hills police force and started pounding the midnight pavements so he and his wife could eat. Now he'll probably be discovered by some producer whose keyhole he found when the producer couldn't.

Most Surprised Party

When the Gary Coopers and daughter, Maria, joined the newlywed John Hustons, Charles Mendl and myself at Merle Oberon's and Lucien Ballard's house, we had no idea we'd participate in a birthday party. But, sure enough, in came a lovely cake with candles bearing the inscription, "Happy Birthday, Maria." The Coopers and Ballards swam while John Huston and I shivered on the safe side of the waves. Evelyn Keyes refused to go in at all. Besides being a good swimmer, Maria plays golf and tennis. "And well," said her mother, "and I'm not boasting" . . . Maureen O'Hara turned talent scout for Director Bruce Humberstone when he said he needed a champion bubble gum blower. Maureen got the part for a neighbor's 6-year-old son, Danny, who's a genius with the gum. Bruce said, "I almost got lockjaw just watching the kid" . . . June Allyson and Dick Powell will soon be visiting the Waldorf. June will play an elevator girl in the new Joe Pasternak Waldorf-Astoria picture . . . Xavier Cugat, starting a series of one-night stands, gets $5000 a night . . . Sam Coslow, producing "Copacabana," is having a song written especially for Merle McHugh . . . Al Deeb came to town with his daughter and Msgr. John McClafferty. Deeb can find the rarest, juiciest steaks in town, and he discovered atomic chrysanthemums. They're that breathtaking.

Hits the Jackpot

Sid Caesar, the guy who's giving Danny Kaye competition, does an imitation of a slot machine in "My Empty Heart" . . . Mike Todd in New York to launch "Galileo," with Charles Laughton, and "Curiosity," Roy Hargrave's thriller. His son, Mike, jr., returned to the Lawrenceville School . . . John Decker and Jim Fleming weren't surprised when Nora Eddington returned to Hollywood with Errol Flynn's father . . . When Bob Fellows heard Murvyn Vye's low, rich, vibrant voice, he said, "There's the guy to do the narration on 'The Big Haircut.'"

Fightin' Words

Boris Karloff plays an Indian chief in DeMille's "Unconquered." From horror man to an Indian. Wonder if the Indians won't object . . . Ty Power air mailed South American orchids to Mrs. Harry Brand . . . Gene Markey added Newcomer Frank Latimore to "My Heart Tells Me," with Nancy Guild . . . Since Lynn Bari finished her Twentieth Century picture contract, Husband Sid Luft will produce her next independently . . . People seemed surprised when Frank Sinatra sang at the Dorsey brothers' Casino Gardens opening. Tommy and Frankie weren't the best of friends when Frank left the band, but when Tommy had that trouble over a battle on a balcony (remember?), Frankie offered to fill in on dates that Tommy thought he couldn't make . . . Reg Whitney of the London Daily Mirror is here being wooed by our studios . . . Marvin Fisher, who writes those dillies for Jack Carson, got remarried, after two years and for the third time, to his former and only wife. Could be he's in a rut . . . Chill Wills was among those present when three firemen lost their lives trying to save others in a San Francisco fire. So he's going up there to put on a benefit for the families of the heroes . . . Can't you picture the surprise on the face of Mrs. Cheever Cowdin's chauffeur, Dewey, when he goes to the airport to pick up Christian of Denmark. A friend gave Mrs. Cowdin a dog named Christian, which is being flown over.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Sept. 23.

This is what happened in Henry Wallace's office Friday: He was talking to his solicitor, Harold Young, when the phone cal from the White House came through. "Yes," said Wallace into the telephone. "Yes . . . very well, Mr. President, if that's your decision." Then he turned to Young and said: "I guess I'll have a lot of packing to do in the next few hours" . . . Wallace reached for the phone again and called his wife. "I wanted you to be the first to know," he told Mrs. Wallace. "I didn't want you to find out by listening to the radio."

Mrs. Henry Wallace

James Osborne, who has been Wallace's chauffeur for many years, is the most bewildered member of his entourage. "I applied for a transfer to the Department of Agriculture when you became Secretary there," said Osborne. "When you became Vice President I applied for a transfer to your new office. Then when you became Secretary of Commerce I had to apply for a transfer to the Commerce Department. Now, Mr. Wallace, will you please tell me where you're going? I want to apply for another transfer."

The Wallace - Byrnes - Truman fight will not end with the firing of Wallace nor with the appointment of anybody else to his Cabinet post. Richard Scandrett of the Dwight Morrow family, who went to Minsk as head of an UNRRA mission, will fire an opening shot. Scandrett has just returned from his six-month trip and will make a speech the theme of which will be "We can get along with Russia. I just did, for six months" . . . It was Wallace, incidentally, who at a private dinner party in New York on December 5, 1941, said of the U. S.-Japanese diplomatic exchanges at the time: "In the poker-game of international diplomacy you ante up and ante up and you finally have to call—when you find that you have nothing left to ante up with any more."

Henry Luce has ordered the resumption of his project for a cultural magazine—the project which ince was abandoned. It will be a monthly magazine, now in charge of Willie Schlam, who is positive that its title will not be "Space. . . . Nauton Wayne and Basil Radford, the imperturable Englishmen of "The Lady Vanishes" and "Night Train," now will be starred in their own films for J. Arthur Rank. The first one will be "Foster Fathers." . . . The newest miniature magazine, published by an all-veterans group, will be called Hence. . . . And the newest paid-for-at-advertising-rates column will be written by Mark Van Doren and copywriter Mildred Riordan Blake, for World Federalists, USA. It will be offered for free syndication.

For the past weeks a jurisdictional battle was waged between two Broadway pressagent unions concerning the Laurence Olivier film, "Henry V." . . . The Association of Theatrical Press Agents and Managers, which is affiliated with AFL, claimed jurisdiction because the movie was being road-shown in theaters. The ATPAM consulted its counsel, Sidney Cohen, about its rights. . . . The Screen Publicists Guild, which is affiliated with the CIO, also claimed jurisdiction because "Henry V" is being distributed by United Artists. The guild consulted its counsel, Hy Glickstein. . . . This brought about an inner-jurisdictional dispute, because both lawyers, Cohen and Glickstein, are partners. They settled it by recommending to their respective union clients that the "Henry V" publicity job go to the Theater Guild's Al Tamarin, who is a member of both unions.

A theater strike was averted last week when the League of New York Theaters agreed to a new contract with the ATPAM granting the press-agents weekly raises up to $45. Anna Rosenberg was the intermediary who settled the dispute . . . Fred Othman, the Washington columnist, will call his forthcoming autobiographical book "Man on the Half-Shell" . . . Prof. Harold Laski and Max Eastman debated about Russia over the Town Hall of the Air. Ely Culbertson, who was to interrogate them on the program, lunched with them in the afternoon. Laski asked Culbertson to read the speech he would deliver that night. "No, I'm too timid to read my speech," said Culbertson . . . "I'll read it," Laski volunteered, and read it aloud — concluding with the lines, "The American people don't want appeasement of Russia a la Laski," etc., etc. . . . Culbertson explained: "I couldn't read my speech because I had some teeth removed today" . . . "You still can bite though," punned Laski . . . "I'm trying to build a bridge to Peace," Culbertson counter-punned . . . "It's the bloodiest bridge I've ever seen," said Laski.

Prize Bull Meets Doom When Truckman Errs

Mandan, N. Dak. (U.P.).—Bill Russell, rancher and comanager of the Mandan creamery, bought a registered Hereford bull for a new herd sire.

He hired a truckdriver and told him to take the bull to the ranch. But the truckdriver got confused and took the animal to the creamery's slaughter house.

Russell got there just in time to see his prize bull go through the hamburger grinder.

Soldier Admits He Helped Slay Pretty Divorcee

East St. Louis, Ill., (A.P.).—Police said today William Anderson, 24, a Burlington, Iowa, soldier stationed at nearby Scott Field, had signed a confession admitting he assisted in the slaying of Mrs. Irene England Elsing, attractive divorcee.

Her weighted body was found in the Mississippi River September 9.

The police said Anderson related in the statement that he struck the 27-year-old mother of two children because she threatened to tell police he was a holdup man unless he devoted all his attentions to her.

He also stated, police said, that a bus driver struck the woman with a pistol butt and helped him bind her body and throw it from a bridge over the Mississippi.

The driver, who has been taken into custody for questioning, denied any knowledge of the killing or the alleged holdups.

Far-Away GIs Like Their Music Sweet

New York, (U.P.).—You can tell how far from home you are by the songs a GI requests.

So say Jennifer and Penelope, the attractive Marshall Sisters, who have just returned from a six months' tour of the Pacific island bases with the "In the Mood" variety unit of USO-Camp Shows.

The St. Petersburg, Fla., singers say even the roughest, toughest soldier audience will quiet right down for a heart-throb, sentimental ballad that reminds them of home.

Such jive numbers as "Cement-mixer" or "Hey, Boba Rebop," may be the hep-cat's dream at the training camp, but by the time a serviceman has been sitting by the road to Tokyo for awhile, he's all for songs of home and mother, according to Jennifer and Penelope. They cite the terrific and lasting popularity of "White Christmas" overseas.

Jewish Gang Blasts Train On Haifa Line

Jerusalem, Palestine, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Jewish extremists blew up the locomotive and two cars of an oil train halfway between Tel Aviv and Haifa tonight, just after the British transport Ocean Vigour sailed out of Haifa harbor for the Cyprus detention camps with nearly 600 illegal Jewish immigrants intercepted yesterday on the little ship Palmakh.

The sabotage was believed to be the Jewish underground's retaliation for the deportations. A band of armed Jews stopped the train, and, after ordering the guard and crew off, put charges under the locomotive and two cars and blew them off the tracks.

None was injured, but traffic on the line between Haifa and central Palestine and Egypt was stopped.

600 Are Deported

Haifa, Palestine, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Approximately 600 illegal Jewish immigrants were transferred to a British troopship today for transshipment to Cyprus, after nearly 100 of them had dived over the side of the blockade runner Palmakh in a desperate but unsuccessful attempt to swim to the Holy Land.

Six soldiers leaped in among the frantic swimmers and fastened ropes to them, as British soldiers and sailors teamed up with Palestine police in preventing the mass escape plan. Police and navy launches scurried through the waters picking up the immigrants.

After the swimmers had been rounded up, the transfer of the refugees to the British troopship Ocean Vigor was accomplished without further incident.

But even as the Palmakh's passengers were embarking on the troopship, the yacht Helopolis arrived in Haifa with 130 more illegal immigrants, who also presumably will be sent to detention camps on Cyprus.

Nine of the passengers from the Palmakh, a small wooden schooner which was towed into Haifa yesterday after a clash with a British naval boarding party, were transferred to a hospital here because of illness.

The body of one, killed in the fighting yesterday, was turned over to the Jewish Agency for burial.

Earlier, an angry crowd of demonstrators had formed in the Hacarmel section of Haifa and had demanded that the body be surrendered by the British.

Tommies fired scattered volleys over the heads of the demonstrators, who finally dispersed.

A buried mass of cooling rock is believed to be the source of heat of the hot springs of Arkansas.

Bald-Headed Women in U. S. On Increase

Chicago, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A veteran wig-maker today said at least 500,000 women are bald and more are getting that way.

"Few of them are totally bald," said George Henri, "but they do need wigs. Quite a few wear toupees."

Henri said he doubted there ever would be as many bald women as men because most hair-shedding among the fair sex is due to illness.

His women customers ranged from 3 years of age to 93. Each buys an average of two wigs a year and all over 16 want glamour.

"The ladies are desperate by the time they get to me," he said. "I've saved some of them from suicide."

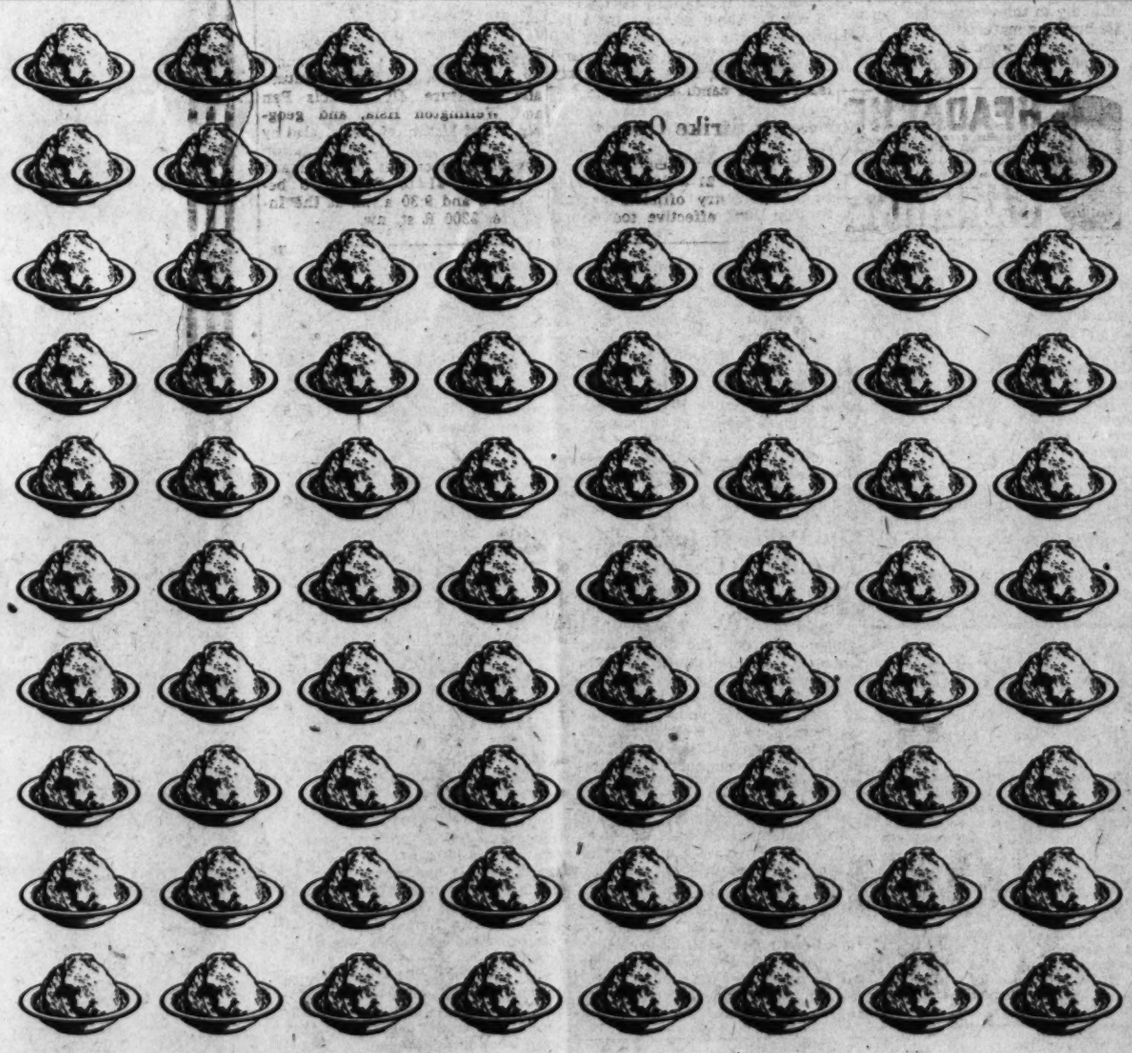

But after they've got their wigs, women are more reconciled to baldness than men, he said. They realize nothing can be done about it.

Burglar Held for Arson

Mount Vernon, Wash. (U.P.).—A 15-year-old Skagit County juvenile is in the detention home after attempting a burglary but committing arson instead. Trying to cut the lock off a strongbox in the home of H. A. Southwick, the youth used his blowtorch carelessly and set fire to the house.

Anti-Lynchers' Views Draw Truman Ire

Paul Robeson, noted Negro baritone, led an antilynching delegation to the White House yesterday, and later told reporters that President Truman "took sharp exception" to some of the group's statements.

One statement that displeased the President, Robeson said, was made by Mrs. Harper Sibley. He quoted her as saying that it seemed inept that "the United States had taken the lead in the Nuremberg trials and yet had fallen so far behind in justice to Negroes in this country."

Robeson said that Mr. Truman, taking exception to the statement, said that "domestic matters should be treated as domestic matters and not be tied in with the international situation."

Robeson, chairman of the American Crusade to End Lynching, represented Mr. Truman as saying that American and Britain were "the last refuge of freedom in the world."

"I told the President," Robeson said, "that the British Empire is the world's greatest enslaver of people. The President didn't like that either and took exception to it."

Robeson, who used to make an annual visit to Russia before the war and who had his son, Paul, jr., attend school there, was asked if it was true, as frequently stated, that he is a Communist.

"No," he said, "but you can say I'm a violent anti-Fascist."

He said that American and British policy today does not support anti-Fascism, and he declared that he told Mr. Truman that James F. Byrnes could not be a good Secretary of State because he is from a Southern State.

"If the Government doesn't do something about these lynchings," he said, "the Negro will."

"The temper of the Negro people will change," Robeson said. "Some national emergency may arise which will call for Federal intervention.

"I asked the President to call a national emergency to deal with mob violence. The President said he could not do that."

Cat Earns Air Trip

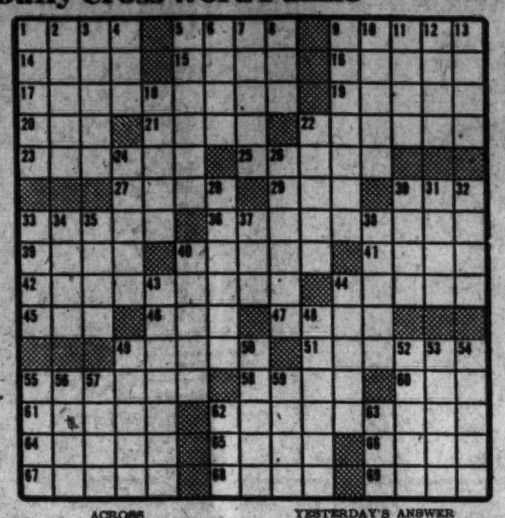

New London, N. H., (U.P.)—When Air Cadet Pat Bule left for his Florida base after a vacation at the home of Miss Gwendolyn Shirley here, she discovered her pet car was missing. Bule reached his base, unpacked and found the cat had traveled with him after having been accidentally locked in his suitcase. The cat was flown home.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Wallace's Ouster Ignored by Party In Massachusetts

Boston, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—President Truman's ousting of Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace virtually was ignored by Massachusetts Democrats who held their annual State convention here today.

The only reference to Wallace's removal came from Representative James M. Curley (D., Mass.), who said "the OPA should be abolished the same way Henry Wallace was removed from office." He did not elaborate.

The Republican State convention meanwhile unleashed a full-scale attack on the Democratic State and national administrations.

"Demoralization" at the Massachusetts State House and "bureaucracy" in Washington was the convention's theme as the 1946 election campaign was opened with the adoption of a 27-point platform and the delivery of speeches by party leaders and candidates.

French Strike Opens Border to Smugglers

Paris, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—A strike of finance ministry officials became 100 per cent effective today, and back and forth across France's borders, unguarded by customs officers for the first time in recorded history, shuttled hundreds of black market operators with duffle bags crammed full of taxable merchandise.

As the operators brought up millions of francs worth of hard-to-get goods, customs guards and officers sat about playing cards and smoking.

Hope of settling the strike, in which 100,000 persons were involved, was lower than last night. Other civil servants were threatening to walk out.

Chinese Studies Classes Will Open on Oct. 7

The School of Chinese Studies of the Institute of Chinese Culture has announced its evening classes for the period October 7 to December 20.

Registration and payment of fees may be made September 21 to October 5 between 8 and 9:30 a. m. at the Institute, 2200 R st. nw.

Long Island Trainmen in Strike Parley

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Some 900 trainment and ticket collectors of the Long Island Railroad, on which 300,000 commuters depend daily to get to their jobs, called a last-minute meeting tonight to decide whether to strike at 12:01 a. m. (EDT) tomorrow.

The men were to meet four hours before strike time to vote on whether to g oahead with their announced plans or hold off pending further study of their dispute by a presidential fact-finding board.

Meanwhile a spokesman for the railroad said every effort would be made to operate the trains if the men strike.

"We will attempt insofar as possible to operate normal schedules," the spokesman said. "Trains will be operated with whatever crews report for duty, together with qualified supervisory employes.

"This service would be much greater than the purely shuttle service provided during the national train strike some months ago."

The trainmen and ticket collectors, members of District 50, United Mine Workers (ALF), have asked 220 rules changes, including an eight-hour day, one day off in seven, time and a half for overtime, and vacations of from two to three weeks.

President Truman's fact-finding board was extended another 30 days last Friday in an effort to settle the dispute.

Representatives of the local met with national officers of the United Mine Workers Union in Washington today and then returned to New York for the general membership meeting tonight.

The railroad has 6000 employes who are members of 17 other unions, including the five railroad brotherhoods. Whether those union members would bross picket lines was not disclosed.

Mayor William O'Dwyer said additional subway trains and bus service would be provided on the lines serving Long Island should there be a strike.

Benning Line Buses Order Brings Protest From Merchants

Two hundred new buses, part of them destined to replace streetcars on the Benning line, a move opposed by H st. ne. businessmen, have been ordered for delivery next summer, the Capital Transit Co. announced yesterday.

The order for the buses, which will cost more than $3,200,000 exclusive of tires, has already been placed with the White Motor Co., Cleveland, subject to the approval of the Public Utilities Commission, the transit company said.

Company officials will appear versus Northeast businessmen at a public hearing before the PUC September 30 to argue the merits of replacing Benning streetcars with buses. The businessmen on H st. fear a loss of business from the change.

The first 50 of the gasoline-powered buses are scheduled for arrival no later than July 27. The rest will arrive during the next three months. They will also be used to replace older and smaller buses now in use on other lines.

Featuring streamlined styling, the buses will be 35 feet long and 96 inches wide. Destination signs will be larger than those on the present buses, allowing for larger lettering.

Windshields will be sloped at 25 degrees to eliminate reflection and increase the driver's visibility range. All windows will be of safety glass. Interiors will have the same basic color styling in blue, tan or green, recently adopted by the transit company.

A fully automatic hydraulic transmission, assuring passengers of a smoother and faster ride since the operator will not have to shift gears once his selection is directed, will also be a feature of the new buses, according to Capital Transit.

The heating system will have automatic positive thermostatic control, changing the heated air in the bus at a rate of 1600 cubic feet per minute. In summer, cool air will be changed at a rate of 3000 cubic feet per minute. The present buses have a maximum rate of change of only 400 cubic feet per minute.

Traffic Study

Director Keneipp's request for a 35 per cent increase in Vehicles and Traffic Department funds next year should receive sympathetic consideration. The $792,000 budget he asks seems large, but it is not large in view of the long overdue improvements he seeks and the magnitude of Washington's traffic problem. The traffic bottlenecks he plans to attack are now of such seriousness as to be a severe impediment to efficient transportation in the city.

The most important part of Mr. Keneipp's proposal is that which deals with a comprehensive study of District traffic conditions. This is in line with the five-year traffic improvement program already approved by the Commissioners. Among the salient points to be covered in the suggested survey are: centralized control of stop lights to insure better timing and adaptation to weather conditions, elimination of unnecessary stop lights and stop signs, better cross-town arterial streets, most efficient use of narrow streets, overhauling of confusing and illegible traffic signs, more extensive marking of traffic lanes and parking zones, studies of accident frequency at certain intersections, and better protection for pedestrians. All of these are important to over-all improvement of conditions.

We are especially happy to note the long-delayed effort to tackle the unnecessary interruptions in traffic flow caused by superfluous or poorly timed traffic signals. We hope that the study will point the way toward integrating stop lights and that it also will provide for eliminating some of the confusing peculiarities—such as the traffic arrows with explanatory signs which are completely illegible at night—that make Washington a deadfall for newcomers. We hope, too, that the survey will pay attention to the need for improved routing of through traffic to avoid congested districts.

If anything is apparent from the traffic tangles that now plague much of Washington, it is that no hit-or-miss corrections will solve the problem. Before intelligent action can be taken, authorities must have definite information on which to base changes. Mr. Keneipp, in his capacity as traffic director, has shown a commendable desire to approach the problem from a broad, city-wide standpoint. A common-sense study of the kind he advocates is the logical starting point both for continued inroads on the accident rate and for making the most efficient use of the city's streets.

Veteran Cooperation

Cooperation of veterans' organizations with Government agencies seeking to meet problems of former servicemen has received a disturbing blow at the hands of one of the largest veterans' groups. The Veterans of Foreign Wars has now enunciated a national policy of refusing to participate in any dealings in which the American Veterans' Committee is represented as an equal. If followed through, this policy threatens to incapacitate veterans' advisory councils in the National Housing Agency and the War Assets Administration, and to hamstring like bodies planned by other Government departments. The chief loser in this provincial gesture will be the veteran.

Clearly the boycott by the VFW is essentially a political move to force nonrecognition of the AVC. The VFW objects to the AVC on the ground that it accepts former members of the merchant marine as well as the armed forces. The VFW also brandishes the charge that the AVC is Communist-dominated. Possibly, too, a fear motive is present. At any rate, the VFW refuses to recognize the AVC as one of the principal veterans' organizations. Locally this doctrine of noncooperation was highlighted last week by the last-minute withdrawal of the VFW and the American Legion—which, although it does not go as far as the VFW, refuses to participate in debate with the AVC—from a forum sponsored by the Woman's National Press Club. Happily the two other major veterans' groups—the Disabled American Veterans and the American Veterans of World War II—displayed a more mature regard for their position and went ahead with the program.

We hold no particular brief for the American Veterans' Committee. We do not believe, however, that the interests of veterans are served by this exhibition of childish pique on the part of the VFW. It amounts to an ultimatum to Government agencies to "play my way or I won't play." We hope that the agencies concerned will resist the challenge until the VFW has a change of heart. Surely the problem facing veterans in housing, employment and the like are of sufficient magnitude to warrant the full cooperation of all groups without resorting to petty political maneuvering.

The Man Wallace

President Roosevelt gave Secretary Wallace the opportunity of a lifetime to command the succession. For the first time in history the office of Vice President under Mr. Wallace was allowed to become great and significant. Mr. Wallace went on missions abroad, directed agencies of Government such as the Board of Economic Warfare, and sat on most of the other war agencies with the dress of almost presidential authority. But somehow Mr. Wallace, who required precisely this chance to overcome his lack of the arts of a politician with politicians, never came through.

It is not easy to figure out the reason. For Mr. Wallace was not, as is sometimes said, a flop in the conduct of his successive departments; on the contrary, he was a success. At Agriculture he left behind him a worthy reputation as an administrator. The same could be said for his tenure of the Board of Economic Warfare. At Commerce he has done equally well. Yet he has even less taste for administration than F. D. R. had, preferring the role of prophet, preferably as John the Baptist. At the same time he knew how to pick subordinates with a skill for administrative work combined with discipleship, and he kept up their loyalty by his personalized concern for their work and interests.

Certainly the reason he never rose to the grand opportunity that Mr. Roosevelt gave him was because of his sheer boredom with practical work. At SPAB, the forerunner of WPB, he used to go to sleep within five minutes after the convening of almost any meeting. It is said that, arousing himself suddenly on hearing the word brass mentioned, he ejaculated "Where are the brass mines, did you say?" This aversion from the practical made his quest for the job of Federal Loan Administrator along with the Commerce Secretaryship verge on the fantastic. Pushkin is more his meat than a balance sheet, the metaphysical more than the physical, ideas rather than plans for carrying them out.

Henry Wallace is one of those men who can't fit into a groove, even a groove of one of his own ideas, though when one of them has him in its possession he becomes inspired. Restraints irk him. His own wings chafe him, and the stars are constantly beckoning. At times, as at the last Democratic convention, he can rise to heights of eloquence, and he is a demagogue only in spots, without the sinister gift of arousing mob passions that characterize Senator Pepper. His future is doubtless cloudy even to himself. But he is firmly ensconced in the public eye, and it is our guess that that eye will stay interested in whatever Mr. Wallace indulges in.

At any rate, we hope so. A stick is useful for a society in which men are apt to mistake things as they are for the cosmic order; nothing is healthier than the cross-fertilization of ideas and collective thinking. Mr. Wallace can wield a stick, he can provoke—as he has done about our foreign policy—some needed thinking. We are grateful to him for performing functions which give expression to the inchoate yearnings of many Americans for a better social order, and, in return, would commend to him, in thinking over our international relations, the words of the old Roman poet:

Let no soft fear lay hold of anyone.
Before us lies a great task to be done.

De Gaulle's Hat

Until now Gen. Charles de Gaulle has been a man without a party or, more accurately, a man above parties. Aside from the extreme Left whose enthusiasm for him cooled when he began to take a critical attitude toward Russia, De Gaulle has had admirers in all camps. But the one party that came closest to reflecting his political views has been the Popular Republicans, or MRP, whose real head is Georges Bidault, Provisional President of France. Now, with the formation of the Gaullist Union, created by Rene Capitant to give battle for the general's political program, De Gaulle is by way of acquiring a personal party, although, thus far, he has publicly refused to approve or disapprove of the organization that bears his name. In the meantime his repeated attacks on the draft constitution which has emerged from the Constituent Assembly has provided his thick-and-thin followers with a rallying point.

It happens that there is a great deal of justice in the criticisms which De Gaulle has voiced against the proposed charter. However, in its present form it represents the only compromise that could meet with the approval of a majority in the Assembly. Whether it will meet with the approval of the electorate is another matter. De Gaulle is gambling on the belief that it will not, that rather than accept a constitution which would leave the President of the Republic little more than a figurehead and give the second Chamber of Parliament only the right to criticize and delay the passage of legislation approved by the Assembly, the voters will agree to continue the present provisional government for a while longer.

If De Gaulle's calculations are right he will emerge once again as a dominant political figure in France, although at the expense of the MRP, which today enjoys the advantage of being the largest political party. If De Gaulle's calculations are wrong, it may mean his permanent political eclipse. In the meantime his intervention in the constitutional struggle has added a new element of uncertainty and confusion to a political situation that is already uncertain and confused enough.

Harriman's Job

The President showed shrewdness in picking Mr. Averell Harriman for the portfolio of Commerce. Mr. Harriman combines in himself all manner of qualifications which had to be considered in choosing a successor to Mr. Wallace. A continuity with the New Deal and Mr. Roosevelt, a standing in the business world big enough to appeal to the business community, a knowledgeability in our foreign relations, particularly with Russia and Britain—all these conspire to make the appointment a wise one. The former Ambassador to Moscow and London will be a useful addition, besides, to the Cabinet. No President in our history is better served with facts than Mr. Truman; none so ill served with understanding. Such a defect, which arises from the deficiencies in his immediate advisorate, will at least be offset with Mr. Harriman enlisted in his official family.

It has always been felt by those who know him—and we don't profess to—that Mr. Harriman has a constructive and comprehending mind. He did not show it when we saw him in action in San Francisco, but by all accounts—and his own statement in London comes as confirmation—he is firmly wedded to the use of our resources in world reconstruction, both economically and culturally. He is heartily back of our propaganda work abroad. He feels that, in such areas as the Danube, a field of activity lies waiting for American enterprise in economic development. In other words, he would "fight for peace" by bettering the world's livelihood and propagating ideas of freedom. Only by so doing can we live up to the responsibilities that destiny has put on our doorstep of moral as well as material leadership.

World Trade

As a basis for public discussion the State Department has outlined in great detail a suggested charter for an international trade organization of the United Nations designed to further the liberal trade policies to which the United States and Great Britain pledged themselves in principle when the British loan was negotiated. The report is expected to afford a basis for discussion by delegates to a group assembling in London next month to prepare for a later United Nations Conference. Among the purposes of the organization are promotion of international action for the production, exchange and consumption of goods, reduction of tariffs and trade barriers, and elimination of all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce. The proposed organization would also assist member countries to develop their industries and expand their foreign trade.

Acting Secretary of State William L. Clayton has issued a timely caution against overoptimism in regard to the speedy removal of trade barriers. He pointed out that the United States, as well as other countries, does not invariably accord equal treatment to trading nations, despite our emphasis on nondiscrimination. We accord Cuba and the Philippines tariff preferences that would be subject to change if other nations were to agree to eliminate tariff preferences. Furthermore we are now subdizing cotton exports, although under the proposed charter export subsidies of this type would be eliminated not later than three years after the charter became effective.

In calling attention to our own departure from the rules of free, nondiscriminatory trading that is the objective of our own policy, our officials have no intention of magnifying the difficulties in the way of attaining the sought-for ends. Their purpose is rather to stress the importance of frank discussion of trade problems and the need for mutual concessions in arriving at solutions. Progress will necessarily be slow toward attainment of our ultimate objectives. But by starting in the right direction the nations of the world will be moving away from the chaos that will surely engulf them if they cling to the exclusionist, discriminatory practices that during the prewar years diverted trade into uneconomic channels, resulted in a severe shrinkage of trade volume, and intensified the political tensions that prepared the way for the second World War.

HEN IN SNOW

She comes out of the chicken house with dignity not suspecting the soft snow awaiting her.
Finding it all about her legs, she stops, arches her neck, looks to the right,
looks to the left, and sees the white expanse around her like a feed bin scattered.
She reaches down and pecks herself a mouthful, and moves again, lifting her feet high and moving delicately, like last century's old maid with skirts lifted.
Suddenly dissatisfied,
she gives her wings a flutter, lifts herself,
and soaring twenty feet across the yard,
she lands breast down deep in the middle of a bank,
and tries to right herself, and fails,
and all her dignity now gone, she flounders,
stretches her long neck goose-like above the snow, and cackles.

"Freedmen's Hospital

As a social welfare agency, may we commend your editorial of September 20, calling for correction of the epidemic conditions at Freedmen's Hospital which have resulted in the death of 15 infants. Your reporter witnessed the deplorable conditions resulting from inefficiency and inadequate staff due to lack of funds. The epidemic will be considered a form of racial discrimination since the epidemic exists only at Freedmen's Hospital, operated by the Federal Government for Negro patients.

The present situation, we feel, also points to the necessity of permitting Negro physicians to care for their patients in hospitals other than Freedmen's. An expectant Negro mother is now subject to most unjust treatment—either she may go to Freedmen's Hospital, with the risk of losing her child from the epidemic, or to Gallinger, the public hospital, or one of the private hospitals, in which case she is deprived of the services of her own physician. You can well imagine the anxiety and resentment created by such alternatives.

We consider it essential that the medical societies and hospital boards should cooperate to change these hospital regulations which are obviously unjust and antisocial, so that an expectant mother may be cared for by her own physician in the maternity wards of all hospitals in the Nation's Capital.

Price Of Food

Re Miriam Blaisdale Ketchum's 1½-person monthly expenditures for food expounded in her letter of September 17. I don't know how she does it. I do patronize chains, don't buy much frozen food, do buy some canned stuff but not as much as I did in January. And my food bill for four (two of them under 5 years) are up. I don't keep neat books, I'm sorry to say, but I have a rough check just the same. In January I was paying out $10 weekly to a cleaning woman and about $7.50 to a "sitter." Now I still withdraw the same amount from the back at the same intervals—and it goes just as fast without those two items. MRS. R. W.

"The Unfilial Son"

The column "The Unfilial Son" of September 19 appeared just in time to satisfy my mounting anger over the articles in Look magazine by Elliot Roosevelt. The author deserves high praise not only for the truth of the article but also for the clever way in which he shows the incompetency of the son of the late President.

In this postwar era it was almost inevitable that the public should be confronted with a certain number of Sunday morning quarterbacks who would point out all the weaknesses of the great men of the war, and who, for reasons often best known to themselves, took particular pleasure in tearing apart the unity for which we all worked so hard during the war years. The works by Capt. Harry Butcher and Ralph Ingersoll fell in this category, but neither of them can compare with this unseemly trash being written by Elliot Roosevelt.

According to the articles in Look the war was won by the clever midnight talks on strategy between FDR and the author in spite of Churchill, the British Empire and the British soldiers and sailors. I only hope the American public will have the intelligence to see through the flimsy veil of ignorance which is being spun by a man who has the same name, but none of the abilities as his famous father. All my congratulations on a most timely piece of writing!

Ray C. B. Brown

Ray C. B. Brown is a distinguished public servant. We read the news of his departure from Washington and from the staff of your newspaper with a sense of sadness. He has been a part of the musical fabric of this community for many years, and has helped immeasurably to strengthen that fabric. Besides losing a distinguished music critic, we are losing an old friend.

Our best thoughts follow him into his retirement which is well earned and richly deserved.

There is an old saying about, "filling his shoes" when a man leaves an important job. In the language of the music world, Constitution Hall just won't seem the same with seat M-2 on the aisle not occupied by Ray C. B. Brown.

Army Negro Policy

If someone told me that we were going to have an uprising of brunettes because "gentlemen prefer blondes" it would make as much sense to me as some of the reasons advanced for not allowing more Negroes to enter our armed forces.

If I were a white mother, Negro youth wouldn't have to sue for the right to serve our common country. I would sue the race-baiters who'd force my son to serve, and leave other citizens so anxious to serve out. WILLA RANSOM.

"U. S." As A Prefix

Properly, only the Federal Government is supposed to prefix United States to an official name, like U. S. Supreme Court, U. S. Court of Appeals.

The official name of the country-wide organization of some 1600 chambers of commerce is Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It's not "United States Chamber of Commerce", for it is not a Federal Government organization. Similiarly it is incorrect to use caps in the phrase "congressional library"; its correct name is Library of Congress.

Mr. Wallace's Foreign Policy

In removing Henry A. Wallace from his Cabinet, the President has put the Administration on record as indorsing the Byrnes policy which apparently consists of: (1) acquiscence in Britain's program of economic imperialism; (2) hostility to a Monroe Doctrine for the Russians in eastern Europe; and (3) attempting to coerce the have-not nations of the world into peace by waving the atomic bomb in their faces.

President Roosevelt was certainly aware that Stalin feared a hostile Anglo-American bloc more than anything else in the postwar world.

As a result, it was the Roosevelt policy to win confidence in our friendly motives by dissociating our policy with that of Great Britain. It was beginning to work.

But now as the culmination of a week of bungling double-talk, the President of the United States has discharged the most far-sighted, inspired, and envisioned member of the Administration. And with Mr. Wallace goes the last hope of genuine friendly understanding with the Soviet Union. T. G.
Camp Lee, Va.

Speaking as a former New Dealer (as far "left" as Wallace) but now as a businessman in Europe, may I offer my two-bits worth of comment on the Wallace diatribe.

During the past six months I have engaged in business with several countries on the periphery of the Soviet Union and have talked with many persons who have been in the Balkan countries, in Poland and Yugoslavia. As in Hitler's Germany, as in mother Russia, human freedoms are being smashed by the clenched fist. If Wallace thinks the Soviet aspiration in Europe and among her neighbors is nothing more than the mild influence of the United States in Latin America he is just about the most misinformed gent breathing free American air. If there is any difference between the Soviet and the Hitlerian German aspiration in Europe it is so thin as to be invisible.

Now Wallace announces that America should not stand in the way of this Soviet expansionism; by the same logic we should not have interferred with Pan Germanism.

May we hope, contrary to Mr. Wallace's soothing sirup, that most Americans realize now that if Britain and America had demonstrated real military power to Hitler's Germany in 1938, we would have been spared World War II. Unfortunately, this seems to be the only language totalitarian dictators understand. A Wallace or a Chamberlain is always their perfect tool.

As a reflection of the Soviet attitude toward United States the incident of my friend who has just returned from one of the Balkan countries will suffice. He had been apprehended by the Soviet police to show his papers and held in custody for some four hours. During the time he offered a Soviet colonel an American cigarette. The colonel stared at my friend and roared "American!" and then raised a clenched fist. This is how much they love us, and that is how much they will love any nation that can stand in their road of European conquest. It is Pan Germanism with another coat.

AMERICAN IN EUROPE.
Paris, France.

The wisest comments on the recent speech of Secretary Wallace that have appeared in your paper are in my judgment those contained in the letter of Mr. Charles Davila, former Romanian Minister to the United States, published in The Post of September 16.

Mr. Davila has not permitted his undoubted concern over the enslavement of eastern Europe to affect the clarity and fair-mindedness of his thinking. He recognizes the fundamental rottenness of the old regimes in much of that area when he says that most of the eastern European nations needed a democratic revolution. Likewise, I suspect, he is giving recognition to the fact of the social and moral bankruptcy of modern capitalism when he speaks of its passing in Eurasia and in the British Isles and when he says that the countries of Eurasia have faith in the United States not because of approval of American capitalism but because of the American ideal of freedom and human dignity.

Mr. Davila is charitable to Mr. Wallace in the matter of motives. He hits the heart of Mr. Wallace's error in logic when he suggests the contradiction therein lies on the one hand in advocating the development of the doctrine of small peoples as contained in the United Nations Charter and on the other hand in denying the responsibility of the United States for insisting upon such rights in eastern Europe. I hope Mr. Wallace reads Mr. Davila's letter.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Editor's Note: Mr. Childs has flown to Scandinavia to study at first hand how the small countries of northern Europe are reacting to current international trends and problems—with particular reference to the conflict between Russia and the West. Following is the first of a series of columns from Europe.

Air Age Miracle

STOCKHOLM—Ships in New York Harbor may or may not be strike bound, but each day half a dozen airplanes take off for European ports from La Guardia Field. This wave of advancing technology is rapidly becoming an important factor in the travel field, with an estimated half million passengers leaving United States airports for foreign countries in the first six months of this year.

We left La Guardia on the inaugural transatlantic flight of the Scandinavian Airlines system. A little less than 24 hours later, we came down in Copenhgaen in the midst of rain and fog. An hour and a half later we were in Oslo. Then the final stop was Stockholm.

A short time ago this would have been accounted a miracle. It is less than two decades since Lindbergh thrilled the world with his flight across the Atlantic. Yet today it is routine.

Three American airlines and five foreign airlines operate to European ports out of La Guardia Field. The pioneer, Pan American, operates 11 flights, American Overseas 12, TWA 9. The foreign lines are Air France, British Overseas Airways, KLM, the Dutch line, Sabena, a Belgian line, and now the Scandinavian system.

In addition to the flights to Europe are daily scheduled flights to Latin America and the Pacific. There are 240 weekly flights to all points in Latin America, exclusive of Mexico. Pan American flies seven times weekly to Honolulu and three times to New Zealand.

Not only are these figures impressive in the first year after the war, but it is perfectly clear that they will increase rapidly. As of August 1, there were 142 planes in foreign service. Certificates have been granted to six other companies not yet operating to foreign ports. The growth has been so rapid that the system of ports is hardly geared to care for it, with incoming and outgoing passengers milling about and customs inspection requiring far longer than it should.

IT IS A strange commentary on the age we live in that once the powerful plane is in the air, all confusions and uncertainties seem left behind. Our Douglas four-motored plane seems to fly effortlessly at about 7000 feet. The earth below is a curious pattern of water and land that, from our altitude, gives no sign of human life.

Out on the bleak brown wastes of Newfoundland is the Gander airbase. Here, too, overcrowding is painful and the limitations on present facilities apparent. Great planes from Europe and the United States are lined up along the airport as passengers get a hurried rest and a snack in what was once the barracks for Army Air Force crews flying the North Atlantic. New and adequate quarters for passengers in transit are said to be in preparation.

"In transit" can mean a fairly long time. An old friend encountered at Gander said he has been there for two and a half days. He had been playing bridge with fellow passengers in the crowded waiting room, with travelers of every nationality passing through—including children who race through the corridors, restless at the prolonged restraint in crowded quarters.

"Bet you five bucks you are stuck here at least 12 hours," said my friend.

Ten minutes later, our plane takes off in the gathering dusk and fog. Very quickly it is above the overcast. On the far horizon is the curtain of the aurora borealis that seems to hang poised in blackness, with yellow green waves that rise and fall like the waves of the sea.

WE IN THE plane, with its throbbing motors, have the sense of being a tiny speck in the vast universe. It is again a curious commentary on our complex civilization to be served an excellent three-course dinner by pretty stewardesses as the plane courses through the infinity of the northern night.

4— CHILDS 11:20 a. m. —

As often as it may happen, sunrise on the eastern horizon will always seem a bit of magic produced by the efficient crew in the pilot's cabin. There is the rocky coast of Scotland, with a white fringe of sea hemming it around. Prestwick airbase, where hundreds of thousands of American flyers and soldiers passed in and out in the war years, is now a rather staid, quiet port for ships of peace to come and go. In a few hours, Scandinavia is seen between breaks in clouds that for so many weeks have plagued this part of the world with incessant rain.

With the end of the flight, there is a curious distortion of the sense of time. It hardly seems possible that we left New York in the midst of a belated heat wave little more than 24 hours before. As we constantly assure ourselves, we are in the midst of the Air Age.

Yet, having been earthbodnud creatures for so long, we cannot bring ourselves to believe it.

Traffic Vs. Trees

Congratulations on the letter by Mrs. Charles Edward Russell entitled "Traffic vs. Trees" published September 22. It expresses the opinion of many people in Washington who sincerely appreciate beautiful trees.

We are from Boston where trees are held of great value, and are astounded at their indiscriminate destruction here.

The Federal Diary

Civil Service Upheld On Veteran Superseniority

Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday ruled that veterans with permanent status in Government have superseniority in their jobs for a year after they return, irrespective of seniority.

In doing so, he upheld the policy of the Civil Service Commission. In other words, the decision will not compel the Government to change its reduction in force regulations regarding competition among veterans.

Civil Service had asked the Attorney General to clarify the matter after the Supreme Court decision in the Fishgold case, which involved superseniority for a veteran in private industry. That decision appeared to have knocked out superseniority. However, Clark said his opinion was not in conflict with the Fishgold decision.

The Attorney General made it clear that the dispute was not between veterans and non-veterans. The issue, he wrote, had not been raised by the Civil Service Commission since preference to veterans is expressly given in acts of Congress and such preference is "beyond dispute."

"The real issue," he wrote, "is between the different groups of veteran preference employes—whether the returning World War II veteran with permanent status shlal be reemployed when such reemployment would require release of another veteran preference employe having a greater length of service."

He then said the returning World War II veteran must be rehired in line with present Civil Service regulations. To do otherwise, he said, would "immeasurably reduce" the effectiveness of the Selective Service Act and the readjustment of World War II veterans to private life. Tha tact requires an employer to give a returning veteran his old job back, or one similar, for at least a year.

But Clark pointed out that a veteran could be discharged for cause during that period. And further, that some returning veterans may not get jobs if the agency in which they were employed no longer exists. In such cases, the Civil Service Commission must try to get them placed in similar jobs elsewhere in Government.

All this means that returned veterans with permanent status will be continued to be classified as A-1-Plus during the first year back on the job. This is the so-called "untouchable" class. It means, too, that permanent status returned veterans with a few years of service will continue to "bump" veterans of World War I who have had 25 and 30 years of service.

The most spectacular case along this line happened several months ago in an Army arsenal in Iowa—a returning status veteran with four years of service bumped his father, who had about 28 years of service, out of a job.

The only issue at stake in the decision was whether the A-1-Plus group was to be abolished and that veterans in this group were to be thrown in competition for jobs with A-1 veterans, all other veterans with permanent status. Clark's ruling means the A-1 Plus group is to be continued.

The rights of veterans who have war service or temporary jobs and all nonveterans were not involved in the decision.

GPO: Its skilled employes are demanding a sizeable wage increase. The 1300 printers in the Government Printing Office tomorrow will ask at a conference with Public Printer Geigengack:

(1) A wage boost from $1.57 to $2.25 an hour, of a raise of 42.6 per cent; (2) an escalator clause which would raise wages 1 per cent for each one point rise in the cost of living here as computed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics; (3) that they be paid what amounts to 2½ days pay for work on a holiday; (4) that the work week be Monday through Friday and that Saturday and Sunday be overtime pay days regardless of the number of hours worked in a single week, and (5) that linotype mechanics and tenders, now of a lower grade be recognized as printers and be given the wage boost.

The pressmen, who are now paid $1.57 and $1.63 an hour are asking for increases to $2.10 and $2.20.

FPHA: Morrill M. Tozier, 35, is a special assistant to Administrator Myer at Federal Public Housing. . . JUSTICE: Phil Elman has returned to the Solicitor General's Office. For the past year he served as denazification legal advisor to General Clay in Berlin . . . VETERANS: It has openings for pharmacists and accountant-auditors in its Richmond office . . . WAR: James Wilson has retired after 45 years of Government service. He was in the audit division, Office of the Chief of Finance.

COMMERCE: Most of its top officials, including the Wallace followers, have adopted a wait-and-see attitude toward W. Averell Harriman, the new secretary. They will stay during the reconversion period and be as helpful as they can be. It's quite possible that Undersecretary Alfred Schindler will insist that he be permitted to resign to re-enter business.

Visible Grain Supply

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Visible supply of wheat increased 1,995,000 bushels to 82,398,000 bushels this week; the Chicago Board of Trade reported today. Corn decreased 1,382,000 to 6,162,000 bushels, oats increased 546,000 to 17,390,000, rye increased 112,000 to 768,000 and barley increased 1,422,000 to 13,784,000.

Five in Race For Virginia House Seat

Staunton, Va., Sept. 23 (AP). — Staunton Democrats will name delegates Tuesday to the Seventh District Democratic convention here September 28 for the nomination of a candidate for Congress, for which two have announced and three others have support of some delegates already named.

S. Fred Switzer, district Democratic chairman and president of the Harrisonburg Telephone Co., announced his candidacy for the nomination Saturday after Rockingham County and Harrisonburg delegations were unanimously instructed for him. The county and city will have 54 votes in the convention.

Three Others Indorsed

R. Kinkly Allen, Amherst lawyer, is the only other announced candidate, but three others have received indorsements of delegations from other district units.

Frederick County Democrats have indorsed Judge Burr P. Harrison, of Winchester, directing that the county's vote be cast for hm "if he permits his name to be presented to the convention." Judge Harrison, informed of the action, said he "deeply" appreciated the interests of his friends.

Augusta County has instructed its 46 delegates, who will have 23 votes, to support delegate C. G. Quesenbery of Waynesboro, who last week asked in a statement that his friends not offer his name. The Augusta action was accompanied with the proviso that if Quesenbery's name is not presented, or is withdrawn, the delegation shall be uninstructed.

The other with votes pledged to him is delegate E. Blackburn Moore of Berryville. Clark County's mass meeting instructed its 14 delegates for him if he permits his name to go before the convention.

Quesenbery Withdraws

Quesenbery, who earlier had announced himself a candidate for the nomination, issued a statement last Friday in which he said a survey of the district indicated a candidate then unannounced already had the nomination "sewed up" and that in view of this situation he was asking his friends not to offer his name.

Switzer's announcement came at the Rockingham-Harrisonburg Democratic mass meeting Saturday. He expressed appreciation for his indorsement and said if nominated he would make a vigorous campaign.

He is a former Harrisonburg postmaster, is active in the Reform Church, serves as a director of the First National Bank of Harrisonburg, and is a past president of the Harrisonburg Chamber of Commerce.

Fugitive Gives Up, Five Still Sought In Norfolk Break

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Norfolk and State police today were conducting a widespread search for five or six Negroes who made a daring escape from the city jail here early Sunday morning.

William Henry Gibbs, jr., 18-year-old felon of Norfolk, who escaped with the group, surrendered to police early today and was held in a detective bureau detention cell for questioning in connection with the jail break.

Gibbs, who has a long juvenile record, was under sentence of two years in prison for storebreaking and larceny at the time of his escape.

One Ballot Likely In Va. Elections

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Only one ballot will be necessary for the November 5 general elections, Attorney General Staples has advised the State Board of Elections.

Marvin Gray, secretary of the elections board, requested the attorney general's opinion on whether it would be necessary to have separate ballots for a referendum on a constitutional amendment and for the special senatorial election to choose a successor to the late Carter Glass. The amendment concerns State and local taxation of Federal Government property.

Staples said there was no legal barrier to submitting all questions on one ballot, but suggested that it might be better to have a separate ballot for the amendment.

Jaycees to Help Young Negro Units

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 23 (AP). A resolution encouraging the formation of units among young Negroes similar to the Virginia State Junior Chamber of Commerce has been adopted by the State JC's board of directors.

The directors passed the resolution at its closing session of the bimonthly meeting here yesterday. The proposal calls upon local white chapters to "encourage, when solicited, the formation of organizations of young Negro men dedicated to the same principles and objectives and operating under similar bylaws" as white junior chambers of commerce.

Hagerstown Factory Cited in NLRB Order

By the Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board disclosed yesterday it had ordered the Victory Hosiery Corp. of Hagerstown to stop discriminating against employes who belong to "the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, or any other labor organization."

The board also ordered that Alma Burgner will be given full reinstatement with back pay retroactive to June 6, and "without prejudice to her seniority or other rights or privileges."

The NLRB ordered the firm to post notices for at least 60 days in the plant informing employes it would not discourage membership in a union by firing or discriminating against them.

Body of Mine Blast Victim Recovered

TWO OTHERS INJURED—The shrouded body of John Howell of Parrott, Va., 49-year-old father of three children, is shown above as it was removed after a blast in the Great Valley Anthracite Coal Corp.'s mine at McCoy, Va. The explosion, apparently caused by ignition of gas, resulted in injuries to two other miners. In the same shaft 12 miners were killed in an explosion last April 18

A. C. Dorrance Is Dead; Head Of Soup Firm

Philadelphia, Sept. 23 (AP). — Arthur C. Dorrance, 53, president of Campbell Soup Co., who died Saturday night at his suburban Ardmore home after a short illness, will be buried tomorrow following funeral services at nearby Bryn Mawr.

Dorrance, a native of Bristol, Pa., first worked for Campbell Soup Co., during summer vacations from Massachusetts Institute of Technology while his brother, the late Dr. John T. Dorrance, headed the firm. Following his graduation from M. I. T. in 1914, Dorrance went to work in the company's Camden plant and four years later rose to president of Franco-American Food Co., of Jersey City, N. J., a subsidiary of the soup company.

In 1917 he volunteered for Army service and after serving as a captain in the coast artillery, was discharged and he returned to the employ of the Campbell company, where he rose to the presidency in 1930 following the death of his brother.

130,000 Va. Homes Lack Electricity, Robertson Says

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Representative A. Willis Robertson said here tonight that there are 130,000 homes in Virginia which still lack electrical power and that despite progress in rural electrification since 1935, a "huge job remains ahead."

"We are living in a technical and mechanical age. To successfully compete the farmer, like the industrialist, must be technically trained and mechanically equipped. In such a program electric horsepower is an essential factor," the Seventh District Representative asserted in a speech at a meeting of the Virginia Electric Cooperatives.

Norfolk Wife Held in Slaying

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Charged with the shotgun slaying of her husband, Albert W. Davis, 54, early last night, Mrs. Lucille Davis remained in the Norfolk City Jail today in default of $10,000 bond.

Preliminary hearing on a homicide charge against Mrs. Davis which was scheduled for police court today, was continued until October 3 by Justice Leonard H. Davis, jr., on motion of the prosecution.

According to Investigating Police Officers G. V. Crosby and R. J. Murden, Mrs. Davis explained that she shot her husband as he sat on the porch of their home at 6:40 p. m. Sunday. They quoted the woman as saying her husband had been drinking and had been abusing her for some time.

Warning Bell Failure Blamed in Train Death

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—Olin R. Andrews, 58, was fatally injured today when his car was struck by the Diesel engine of a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train at a crossing near the Roxbury State Reformatory for Males, Deputy Sheriff Clever Reynolds said.

The Washington County officer said two witnesses had told him the bell signal at the crossing was not working at the time.

Lieut. Gov. Collins Defends Role in Legion Resolution

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Lieut. Gov. Lewis Preston Collins has explained the part he played in helping draft a resolution suggesting the resignation of a conscientious objector from the faculty of Marion High School.

Declaring that he served on the resolutions committee of Smyth County American Legion Post, No. 18, which drew up the resolution, as an "individual" and not as a State official, Collins said he had done nothing to conflict with his oath of office as lieutenant governor.

Hit by Church Group

The executive committee of the Virginia Council of Churches, in denouncing the post's action last week, had said it appeared that Collins, in helping draft the resolution had "inadvertently placed a stigma upon the reputation of this State."

The day after the resolution was passed, Evan Hollingsworth, the conscientious objector in World War II referred to, resigned his teaching post, saying it was "surprising that a man of Lieutenant Governor Collins' political and legal experience would sign the statement which is in direct opposition to the Virginia ordinance of religious freedom."

Mayor B. L. Dickinson of Marion resigned as chairman of the county school board in protest against the board's acceptance of Hollingsworth's resignation.

The lieutenant governor said the resolutions committee drew up an "extremely temperate" resolution expressing the sentiment of the legionairres.

Aimed at School Board

"The legion never had in mind to force Hollingsworth's resignation," he said, "we recognized his legal right to continue teaching under his contract with the school board. Our criticism was directed at the board for its lack of discretion in employing a conscientious objector as a teacher of children who one day may have to fight to preserve the very freedom Mr. Hollingsworth enjoys.

"The town was ablaze over the whole matter. Some parents already had taken their children out of school. The Veterans of Foreign Wars had passed a strong resolution on the subject. Anything could have happened. The situation just couldn't continue. Something had to be done."

League Advocates Game Wardens Under State Rule

Front Royal, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—A recommendation that Virginia make game wardens "State" rather than "county" officers has been adopted by the Virginia division of the Isaak Walton League of America.

The organization also recommended that the wardens be trained in biological and game management principles and practices, that they be adequately compensated and that they be relieved of dog law enforcement.

20 Martin Mariner Planes Ordered by Navy

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Navy has ordered 20 Martin Mariner amphibian planes, the largest ever to be built, the Glenn L. Martin Co. announced.

Delivery is to start in about a year and the order to be completed at the rate of two a month. The planes, with a gross weight of 62,500 pounds, are equipped with jet-assisted take-off devices.

Winchester Truckers In Sympathy Strike

Winchester, Va., Sept. 23 (Spl).—Approximately 125 union employes of the Novick Transfer Co. here have been ordered off their jobs in sympathy with the general trucking strike in Cumberland.

A spokesman at Novick's said the action of the AFL Local 453, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, ties up all operations affecting a fleet of more than 100 trucks.

Virginia to Put Many Liquors on Ration-Free List

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP). — Virginians will be allowed to purchase many additional liquors—when available — without a ration book in October, the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has announced.

The board also will continue the present rationing of one bottle per month to each book holder of the better and scarcer brands of whisky.

Added to the ration-free list will be all gins, brandies, rums, liqueurs, cordials and ready-mixed cocktails. They may be bought up to the legal limit of one gallon at a time without display of a ration book.

Burial Set Today For Poindexter

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Funeral services for former United States Senator Miles Poindexter will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the home at Greenlee, where he was found dead in bed Saturday. Burial will be in Lexington Cemetery.

Arrangements had not been completed this morning, but the Senator's son, Gayle Aylett Poindexter of Spokane, who arrived by plane yesterday from Denver, was expected to announce details later. Mr. Poindexter was on his way oack to Spokane after a visit to Greenlee when he learned of his father's death.

W. Va. County to Vote On Special School Levy

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Berkeley County School Superintendent William G. Ropp announced today that voters would be asked to approve a special three-year levy at the November general election to provide $60,000 annually for schools.

Ropp said that it was estimated that the schools have only enough funds at present to operate eight months and one week, and that approval of the special levy would mean the regulation nine months term.

BARNABY

Lane Snubs Communist Bid to Rally

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—An invitation to sit on the platform during a Communist Party rally here October 13 has been turned down by William Preston Lane, jr., Democratic candidate for Governor.

Philip Frankfeld, chairman of the Maryland and District of Columbia Communist Party, said Lane's appearance during an address by Benjamin Davis, jr., Negro, New York City councilman, would show "a real spirit of democracy."

Lane termed this suggestion "as impertinent as it is untrue."

"It is evident that your invitation is prompted by the fact that I . . . am at the moment in the midst of a campaign," he wrote Frankfeld yesterday.

"My appearance, therefore, would not be any manifestation of a real spirit of 'democracy in action' but would be a rather obvious effort to win votes for my candidacy through such a hypocritical gesture as to constitute an insult to every intelligent Negro.

"My own sincere interest over a period of years in the proper solution of racial problems makes it unnecessary for me to try to convince anybody for purely campaign purposes that I hold no racial or religious prejudices.

"I do not believe that your organization is interested in the 'real spirit of democracy' . . . my observation is that the Communist Party is entirely willing to use and obtain all possible benefits from the democratic form of government, . . . while working to spread propaganda in favor of communistic principles . . . antagonistic to . . . democracy."

Lane said he was a believer in Jeffersonian principles of democracy and "completely and unalterably opposed to the Communist Party and to Communist principles."

500 Rail Fans Take Special Trip on B. & O.

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—Some 500 would-be railroaders from Washington, Philadelphia and Baltimore took a special excursion on the Baltimore & Ohio's old main line from Baltimore through Relay, Ellicott City, and Mount Airy junction to Brunswick yesterday.

Board Approves Crisfield Seafood Laboratory Plan

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—The Maryland Board of Public Works today unanimously approved the proposal for building of a $75,000 seafood laboratory at Crisfield, Md.

Also before the board were proposals to increase welfare payments and the salary of Dr. H. C. Byrd as president of the University of Maryland.

At present welfare payments are being made at the June level of expenditures and are in excess of one twelfth of the fiscal 1947 appropriation.

The board of regents at Maryland has recommended that Byrd's salary be increased from $15,000 to $17,500.

Pay Boost Ends Shuckers' Strike

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—Melvin Tyler, secretary of the Seafood Workers Union Local No. 453 (AFL), said today members of the Chrisfield Seafood Association had agreed to workers' demands for 85 cents a gallon for shucking oysters and that shuckers would be on the job tomorrow.

Approximately 600 union members refused to report for work all last week and kept idle all but one nonunion canning plant.

Packers estimated their losses were small because warm weather since the season opened September 15 kept receipts down.

Municipal League Opens Va. Parley

Virginia Beach, Va., Sept. 23 (AP). The forty-first annual convention of the League of Virginia Municipalities got under way at the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach, today, with registration of delegates and guests and with a series of breakfast group meetings.

Ronald R. Locke, Norfolk City planning engineer, presided at one of these which was attended by planning and zoning officials. G. L. Reed, chairman of the Richmond City planning commission, spoke on "Steps in the Development of a Municipal Master Plan."

Study Is Made Of Trans-Bay Span, Airfield

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP).—A study of what effect the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge at Sandy Point would have on the United States Naval Academy's plans for an airfield in the same area has been sent to the Navy Department. Vice Adm. Aubrey W. Fitch, academy superintendent, said today.

His announcement was made in a letter to William Preston Lane jr., Democratic gubernatorial candidate, who had asked him if the Navy planned to object to the bridge or to change its proposed location for the air training field.

Admiral Fitch told Lane the study had been made "to determine whether the proposed location of the Chesapeake Bay bridge would afford obstruction or hazards to air operations from the proposed airfield.

"I am fully aware of the tremendous interest of the people of the State of Maryland in the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge and assure you that I hope there will be no conflict in our respective interests," he said.

Admiral Fitch said the Navy Department's decision would be sent directly to Lane following consideration of the survey.

In an inquiry to Admiral Fitch, the candidate suggested the bridge might make other airfield sites more easily available to the academy.

Western terminus of the bridge would be a point south of Sandy Point but north of Annapolis.

Va. High Court To Hear Plea Of Mrs. Smith

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Appeals in four criminal cases, 19 civil cases, an Industrial Commission case and one from the State Corporation Commission will be heard by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals at its term opening here October 7.

Clerk M. B. Watts said today that the court's October term will open with a hearing on the appeal of Grace M. Smith from a 20-year sentence imposed by the Rockingham County Circuit Court on conviction of murder in the death of her husband, Frank C. Smith, the night of February 20, 1945.

Mrs. Smith was found guilty after a week-long trial in Harrisonburg last October.

Mrs. Smith contends on appeal that she is innocent and that the evidence supports a verdict of suicide in the death of her husband. Error also is assigned because of the trial court's refusal to grant a change of venue and because of the court's admission of certain testimony.

In the trial in Rockingham Circuit Court, evidence presented to the jury attempted to establish that Mrs. Smith and Ralph H. Garner united to murder Smith by hanging him in the basement of the Smith home.

In a subsequent trial, Garner was convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 20 years in the State penitentiary.

St. John's College Starts 250th Year With 240 Enrolled

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—St. John's College began its 250th academic year with 240 students enrolled, including 159 veterans. The session marked the ninth year of the "new program," under which the students pursue courses based upon the "world's great books."

The students went to classes after a formal convocation ceremony yesterday at which gowned professors welcomed them. In the evening, President Stringfellow Barr reported to the student body in an address at Randall Hall.

Enrollment in the college increased by 75 over last year, reaching 240.

Like all colleges, St. John's has had many more applications for enrollment than it could handle. The housing as well as the teacher shortage have made larger classes impossible.

Three barracks containing four apartments each have been erected on the campus for married students.

Va. Tobacco Auctions Open; Prices Strong

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Prices were reported strong in early sales as Virginia's 11 Old Belt tobacco markets opened today for the 1946 bright-leaf auction season, and upheld premarket estimates of higher prices than were received last year when OPA ceilings prevailed.

At Danville, the first 22 piles of leaf sold in one warehouse averaged $52 per hundredweight. Thomas H. Brown, market supervisor, predicted the day's average would "run around 50 cents a pound," an average that would be higher than any opening day since 1919.

Local Prices Listed

Elsewhere early reports indicated high prices on opening sales.

At Petersburg, where opening sales were conducted in the Virginia warehouse, early prices ranged from 66 cents a pound for top grades down to 12 cents for poor grades. It was estimated that offerings totaled 500,000 pounds.

Some 600,000 pounds of bright leaf was offered at South Hill, where the first pile leaf sold at $63 per hundredweight, and of the first row of 21 stacks, 17 sold at from $60 to $65 per hundred, with the higher figure predominant. In this group, the lowest price was $40 per hundredweight.

Most of Harvest In

At South Boston, the price ranged from $66 for the best leaf down to $11 for trashy leaf. Warehouses were reported filled for the opening sales.

Approximately 90 per cent of the crop already has been harvested, according to the Virginia Cooperative Crop Reporting Service, which estimates production at 122,850,000 pounds, some 5 per cent above the 1945 production.

Virginia's old belt markets are Danville, South Boston, Martinsville, Rocky Mount, Petersburg, Chase City, South Hill, Brookneal, Clarksville, Kenbridge and Lawrenceville.

Somerset Jury Convenes, Faces 2 Slaying Cases

Princess Anne, Md., Sept. 23 (AP). Chief Judge Levin Claude Bailey opened the September term of Somerset County Circuit Court today with an instruction that the grand jury study violations of gambling laws in the county.

Before it were murder charges against Ross J. Abbott, 24-year-old Deal Island veteran, and Mrs. Iva P. Krumholz, 40-year-old Princess Anne tavern keeper.

Abbott is accused of slaying his sweetheart, 20-year-old Pansy Twigg, after she announced her engagement to another.

Mrs. Krumholz was picked up by the FBI in Cincinnati on a fugitive warrant two weeks after Rollin Roscoe Riley was found slain in his part-time apartment above a Princess Anne liquor store. The Vineland (N. J.) poultry buyer had been shot through the head.

Submarines Again At Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—Revival of the midshipman indoctrination program in submarine warfare was announced today by Vice Admiral Aubrey C. Fitch, superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, with the arrival of two submarines.

The U. S. S. Dogfish and Sablefish tied up at Santee dock at the academy and will be used for training first classmen during the fall term. The submarines are attached to Squadron 8 of the Atlantic Fleet.

The submarine indoctrination program was carried on before the war but abandoned during hostilities. The course for first classmen will include a series of lectures, coupled with cruises and diving practice in Chesapeake Bay.

Cards Hang Onto Half-Game Edge

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IF CLARK GRIFFITH were not already a member of baseball's Hall of Fame he could have qualified for his part in a super-duper bit of duping in which he was out-foxed by the Mexican League earlier this season.

POVICH

Only now has the story come to light. Griffith knew that the Pasquels had attempted to lure his shortstop, Cecil Travis, with a proposition to jump to the Mexican League when the Washington team was in Havana last March, but what he didn't know was that as late as June the Mexicans were still trying to interest Travis in going to Mexico.

Unwittingly, Griffith himself paved the way for a Mexican agent to talk to Travis on the Washington bench in June. The fellow, a New Yorker, represented himself as "Jake Warren," a Boston baseball writer, invaded Griffith's office, and said he would like to interview Travis. The Nats' owner overlooked the lack of credentials and said, "Sure, any baseball writer can talk to my ballplayers."

After that, there was small talk between Griffith and "Jake Warren." How were things going with the Red Sox? Had he seen Joe Cronin lately? The Nats' owner was most hospitable.

Before "JAKE WARREN" took his leave of Griffith, he apologized for not having with him his baseball writer's card. "How do I get through the gates?" he asked.

That was easy. "You just go over to the pass gate, and tell them to look up here at my office window, and I'll give them the high sign," said Griffith. "I wave in a lot of my friends that way."

So, a moment later Griffith was leaning from the window of his little stucco office, waving through the gate an agent of the Pasquel's who was trying to sign one of Griffith's most valuable ballplayers. The Nats' owner always was a trusting soul.

To the Nats' dugout, Jake Warren on his cloak-and-dagger mission, made his way. He asked a ballplayer where he could locate Travis. The Nats' shortstop was on the field he was told, but would be in shortly. The agent waited it out on the dugout steps, until Travis came loping off the field after infield practice.

"HEY, CECE!" yelled Jeff Heath, "you're wanted down stairs. One of Pasquel's agents from the Mexican League wants to talk to you." Heath was grinning widely, never dreaming that he wasn't jesting. He couldn't have been more correct, if had been psychic.

It was in the dressing room that Mr. Griffith built for his ballplayers that the Pasquel representative talked to Travis about jumping to Mexico. He wasn't kidding. There would be a certified check for $15,000 in Travis' hands that night if he accepted.

The fact is that Travis didn't give the fellow a short answer. What was the proposition? Well, the $15,000 check would be for signing only. There would be a five-year contract at $20,000 a year in addition, if Travis signed.

"I'll let you know," said Travis. He never did. The Washington club went to Cleveland a few days later. There, the same man approached him again. This time, Travis' answer was "no." He'd thought it over, he said, and was hearing too much about the conditions in Mexico. He wished the Pasquels would stop bothering him.

THIS STORY is news to Griffith. Certainly he remembers the man who said he was a Boston baseball writer, and surely he recalls waving the fellow through the gate. He did all that in good faith, genial as always with his visitors. The taciturn Travis didn't use the Mexican offer to hit Griffith up far an increase in salary, as Stan Musial hit the Cards when he got a similar offer from the Pasquels.

Griffith has earned his share of fame in baseball. He is credited with throwing the first screwball ever attempted by a pitcher, and it was Griffith's feud with John McGraw that caused the rules committee to rule a foul bunt on the third strike as a strike-out. He was the prime founder of the American League and he has been high in the councils of the game as a club president for 26 years.

And now he holds one more exclusive record—the only club owner to wave into the park, tax free, an agent of the Mexican League who wanted to sign one of his ballplayers.

Skins' Ground Game, Pass Defense and Guards Weak

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Let's sit down here and talk sense about the Redskins.

They've played out their string of five exhibition games. Next Sunday they open the National League championship race here against the improved Pittsburgh Steelers.

Now where do they stand—on paper?

Frankly, things aren't as rosy looking for Coach Turk Edwards' all-star cast as they appeared to be a couple of weeks ago. Weaknesses must be corrected if the club is to successfully defend its Eastern division championship and barge into the playoffs again this season.

It's this way: The Skins have played three National league rivals in warm-ups. They lost to the Los Angeles Rams, 14-16; beat the Green Bay Packers, 35-31, then took a 14-20 tanning by the Chicago Bears in Baltimore Sunday.

Mouse-Traps Get 'Em

Biggest weakness appears to be at the guards. Only one veteran, Clem Stralka, is numebered among the five who will be retained. The others, Bill Ward, Johnny Steber, Oscar Britt and Johnny Jaffurs are good looking rookies but suffer from inexperience.

Sunday, for instance, they were mouse-trapped time and again by the smart veteran Bear forwards as namely Bill Osmanski, George McAfee and Hugh Gallarneau, romped through for goodly gains at crucial points.

Only experience will teach these youngsters. They are all tough and smart. They figure to develop into a better than average quartet but it will require time.

The tackles are strong and dependable. The ends are sufficient and capable. And there aren't three better centers on one club than Ki Aldrich, Al DeMao and Rookie Clyde Ehrhardt.

Kavanaugh Simply Too Tall

An inadequate pass defense also is bothering the club. Of course, Wilbur Moore and Bob DeFruiter, two of their aces in that phase have been hurt and their return will strengthen the club.

Dick Todd, who Coach Turk Edwards claims is the best pass defense man in the league in the safety position, was forced to shift t othe right halfback post Sunday against the Bears. Playing out of position, he was hardly a match for the towering, long-striding Ken Kavanaugh, who caught 6 of the 10 completions the Bears made.

The running attack needs brushing, as a 46-yard pickup against the Bears all too plainly reveals. That should improve with the return of fullback Frank Akins.

Most consoling thought: the champion Rams beat 'em only two points and the revitalized Bears whipped them by a six-point margin. Which isn't too bad, if the apparent flaws are corrected.

Thirty-six Fans Win Big Daily Double Pool

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 23 (AP).—Thirty-six fans in the crowd of 8872 at Atlantic City racetrack held tickets which paid off $1242.30 for $2 in the daily double pool today.

It was one of the largest daily double payoffs in the history of New Jersey racing. Nick Jemas piloted Gilded Trump to a victory in the first race that paid $64.10, and Ration Book, with Bobby Permane up, came home first in the second at $21.40.

Two Plead Guilty in Ringer Case

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—William F. Mink and Paul E. Middleton, Wilmington (Del.) horsemen, today pleaded guilty to entering a "ringer" in a race at Bel Air track July 24 and were fined $1000 and costs each.

They had been charged with conspiracy and an attempt to obtain money under false pretenses from the Harford County Fair Association, operators of the track.

G. Howlett Coburn, counsel, entered their pleas before his father, Judge Frederick Lee Coburn, in Harford County Circuit Court. Neither Mink nor Middleton appeared.

The younger Coburn said States Attorney Paul D. McNabb had agreed $1000 was a just penalty since the horse was scratched from the race and no fraud was consummated.

Mink was the owner of a horse entered as "All Flo." Track stewards scratched the entry when its identity was questioned and it later was established that the horse was "Don't Delay," owned by Middleton.

George P. Mahoney, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, announced later that the horse entered as "All Flo" had been drugged before the race.

The West Virginia Racing Commission barred Mink and Middleton from tracks in that State after charging that "Don't Delay" ran as "All Flo" in four races at Charles Town. The horse once came in at 11 to 1 and was third in another race.

The owners contended "Don't Delay" had been shipped by mistake from Middleton's farm, first to Charles Town and then to Bel Air.

Kirby Paces Women's Golf

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 23 (AP).—Steady Swinging Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., whipped around the long Southern Hills country club course in even-par 75 today to capture medal honors in the opening qualifying round of the National Women's Amateur golf tournament.

Topping a field of 59 starters in the first national since 1941, Miss Kirby was two strokes better than the cofavorites, Western Amateur Champion Louise Suggs, of Atlanta, Ga., and the famed Babe Didrikson Zaharias, Denver, Colo., and Jean Hopkins of Rocky River, Ohio, each with 77's.

Mrs. Jacqueline Pung, the Honolulu amateur champion, and Helen Sigel of Philadelphia, Pa., were only three strokes off the pace with 78's, while Beverly Hanson, Fargo, N. Dak., at 79, was the only other player under 80.

Grouped at 80 were Dorothy Kielty, Long Beach, Calif., Mrs. E. S. Blanton, Tulsa, and Ann Casey, Mason City, Iowa.

The second qualifying round is scheduled for tomorrow.

Moore Denies He'll Be Pilot

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Terry Moore, veteran centerfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, said today he had received no offers of any managerial job and did not plan to manage until his playing career is definitely ended.

Moore will undergo an operation on his left knee after the close of the season and said he hoped to play two or three more years, if the operation is successful.

Rumors had connected the popular Cardinal captain with several big league positions, including both Chincinnati and the New York Yankees.

McKechnie to Yanks Rumor Is Unconfirmed

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Rumors circulating here that Bill McKechnie, who resigned as manager of the Ceincinnati Reds, would be the 1947 field leader of the New York Yankees failed to gain any confirmation today.

"It just sounds like mere idle chatter to me," said Bill MacPhail, secretary for air transportation for the Yanks.

Meanwhile, McKechnie, has announced that he will sever connections with the Reds at St. Louis Wednesday night after the conclusion contest of a two-game series with the Cardinals.

Gabe Paul, Reds' traveling secretary, said it was understood that McKechnie would name one of the coaches acting manager at his departure for his home in Wilkinsburg, a suburb of Pittsburgh. His likely choice, Gabe said, was James Wilson, who frequently piloted the team in McKechnie's absence.

Assault Entered In Laurel Feature

Laurel, Md., Sept. 23 (AP).—Assault, the Klebergs' Texas speedster, heads a list of 36 nominees announced today for the $15,000 Maryland Handicap at Laurel Park on Saturday, October 12.

Also on the list are Eeternal Reward, winner of the American Derby; Hypnotic, Bellair Stud's consistent Filly, and Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Mahout, conquerer of Assault at Garden State.

Brooklyn Asked To Pray for Bums

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Rev. Benney J. C. Benson, chaplain of the Kings County American Legion Post, today called upon the people of Brooklyn to observe a minute of prayer at noon each day this week for the success of the National League pennant-chasing Dodgers.

"We've prayed for military victories and everything else, so why not pray for the Dodgers," said Rev. Benson, who is minister of Greenpoint Reformed Church in Brooklyn.

Hoyas Come Up for Air

"Quick, Watson, the needle!" is passe.

Soon it will be: "Quick, coach, the oxygen tank"

Georgetown University's football team this year may carry as standard equipment a portable oxygen tank which, it is believed, will more quickly enable players to regain short breaths and relieve extra strain on the heart.

The tank, now under construction in Philadelphia, will be mounted on wheels and will contain 11 outlets permitting players to breathe simultaneously from individual demand-type masks during time outs.

It will be used during games this coming season if experiments during practice sessions prove it practical. Doctors an internes at Georgetown University will conduct the experiments.

The tank is expected to be delivered next week. Several doctors have notified Georgetown athletic officials that 30 seconds of pure oxygen is sufficient to restore a badly winded person's breathing to normal.

The experiment on football players was decided after Army reports, telling of the success of oxygen experiments, were released.

Goldie, Turner Still Wrangling

Boxing Promoter Goldie Ahearn's indoor activities at Uline Arena this winter appeared to be very much in jeopardy yesterday when Mike Uline, owner and operator of the Northeast emporium told the District Boxing Commission he would be "less and less interested" in boxing unless he could secure every Monday night as a fight date.

Uline, attending a special meeting of the commission, said he had too many other offers to tie-up his plant for boxing on a twice per month basis.

He offered Promoter Joe Turner, who shares Monday nights with Ahearn, the use of Uline Arena for his fights. But Turner, with his own arena at 14th and W sts. nw., rejected the bid.

Uline and Ahearn scheduled a conference for Friday over available dates.

Lanier Reported Jumping Team

Mexico City, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Max Lanier, former St. Louis Cardinal southpaw, was reported today to have "jumped" the Vera Cruz team of the Mexican League, but the reports said he would not leave the league.

Lanier was not immediately available for comment.

Jorge Pasquel, president of the league and owner of the Vera Cruz team, which Catcher Mickey Owen jumped last month to return to the United States, said he would send a "very strong letter" to Lanier.

Lambert Signs Contract

Buffaalo, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP).—Ward Lewis (Piggy) Lambert, veteran Purdue University cage coach, today signed a three-year contract as commissioner of the National Professional Basketball League at a league meeting here.

Doc Blanchard, Leg Injured, May Miss Oklahoma Game

New York, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Felix (Doc) Blanchard, Army's battering All-American fullback, was disclosed today to have suffered a serious leg injury against Villanova which may keep him out of Saturday's tilt with rugged Oklahoma.

Blanchard, the dynamite of the Army attack whose presence was missed sorely after he left the Villanova game in the first quarter, bruised a muscle and it will not be known until Wednesday or Thursday whether he will be available for Army's second game.

When he limped from the field, Army announced he had suffered a heel bruise during practice. But Col. Harvey (Jabbo) Jablonski, Cadet line coach, said today the leg injury was suffered in the game.

Two second-stringers also were injured against Villanova. Lacking reserves already, Army lost the services of End Tom Hayes, Hastings, Nebr., dislocated shoulder, and Center Bill Yoeman, Glendale, Ariz., ankle injury.

Jablonski, former Army star speaking before the New York football Writers' Association, said that Oklahoma would be a formidable foe.

"Their line will average 210 pounds," he declared, "and they have been strengthened greatly by returned servicemen. Our line averages about 201."

Yanks Beat Macks, 9-6

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The New York Yankees ended their home season today by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics, 9-6. It was the Yanks' 47th win as against 30 losses in the stadium this season.

The third-placers wasted little time in clinching the game, scoring seven runs in the first two innings off Bob Savage and Everett Fagan.

Vic Raschi, recent importation from the Yanks' Newark International League farm club, went the route in his first major league start and scattered nine Athletic hits.

The rookie right-hander fanned eight in handing the tailend A's their 100th defeat of the season.

Coin Decides Playoff Site

New York, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—With the aid of a tossed coin, National League President Ford Frick decided today that if the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers end the National League race in a tie they will open a three-game play-off series at St. Louis on Tuesday, October 1, with the World Series opener set back to October 6.

The second play-off game would be played at Brooklyn on Thursday, October 3, and if a third game is necessary that also would be played at Brooklyn October 4.

In the event of a play-off, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler ruled the World Series would open in the park of the National League champion on Sunday, October 6 and the second game will be played in the same park the next day.

Slaughters's Wife Charges Cruelty

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Enos Slaughter, 30, St. Louis Cardinals' right fielder, was sued for separate maintenance today by Mrs. Josephine Slaughter, 28, of Chicago, who alleged cruelty.

The suit stated Slaughter struck his wife in the face June 9. They were married February 13, 1943, and have no children.

Bums Score 5 After Look at Scoreboard

Brooklyn, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—The wary, weary Brooklyn Dodgers, playing with one eye on the score board and the other on the Phillies, put on a five-run rally in the eighth today to beat Philadelphia, 6 to 1 and stay a half-game behind the leading St. Louis Cardinals.

The "Atomic Bums," who seem to be running on a treadmill in their efforts to catch the Cardinals, put on their big rally in the eighth after the 1 to 0 victory for St. Louis over the Cubs at Chicago had been posted on the scoreboard.

Until that inning it had been a grim, gray day for the 13,038 Flatbush Faithful.

The Dodgers now have only four games remaining, two with the fiery Phils and two with the Boston Braves. St. Louis has five left, two against Cincinnati and three against Chicago.

Rookie Carl Furillo started the big Dodgers inning by coaxing a walk. Peewee Reese, intending to sacrifice bounced a bunt over Raffensberger's head for a single.

Catcher Bruce Edwards moved the runners to second and third with a sacrifice and Howie Schultz drew an intentional pass. With the bases loaded Rookie Stan Rojek dropped a single behind first to score Furillo.

Eddie Stanky dropped a perfect squeeze bunt in front of the plate for a hit to score Reese. Cookie Lavagetto sent Schultz and Rojek across with a sharp right field single and Augie Galan wound up the rally by scoring Stankey with a long fly.

Look Out! Pasquel Back

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Bernardo Pasquel, vice president of the Mexican Baseball League, declared today that the circuit was considering inviting five United States Major League players to Mexico for a vacation after the World Series "to see the country and talk with us."

Pasquel, who arrived at La Guardia Field from Paris this afternoon, would not reveal the players' names or their teams. He added that although he and his brother have not made any actual offers to Johnny Pesky and Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, the Pasquels were "on sort of terms with them now. All we are waiting for is to know how much they want."

The Mexican baseball magnate said he understood, also, that his brother, Jorge, already had talked with Bobby Feller, Cleveland Indians' pitcher, but Bernardo explained that he would not know the outcome of the conversations until he talks with his brother.

The Mexican League official finished what he described as a one-month "pleasure trip" through Switzerland, England, France and Belgium. He traveled on a Mexican diplomatic passport issued by the ministry of foreign affairs.

Grid Star Held On $40,000 Bond

Detroit, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Guy Brown, Negro football star at the University of Detroit, was jailed in lieu of $40,000 bond today on charges of raping two white women.

Brown, 21, stood mute at his arraignment and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. He has admitted stealing the purses of two women in a theater, but has denied the attack charges on two others.

Breechen Pitches, Bats Way to Win

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—Harry Brecheen protected the St. Louis Cardinals' half game lead over Brooklyn today with a brilliant nine-hit, 1-0 shutout over his "cousins" from Chicago, driving home the winning run himself with a third-inning single.

Hurling his third shutout against the Cubs and beating them for the fifth time, the crafty southpaw vet never had to work harder in his big league career.

Garagiola Starts It

Joe Garagiola had opened the St. Louis second with a single to right, the first hit off starter Hank Wyse. Marty Marion's sacrifice bunt moved the rookie catcher to second, setting the stage for Brecheen's game-winning sock, a ball that bounced over second base and took an inspired hop away from Billy Jurges' glove.

The cat-like St. Louis left-hander, whose fielding ability has saved him more than one game, was in real trouble in the second when Bob Sturgeon's single, Bill Nicholson's double and a walk to Jurges loaded the sacks with one out. Fast fielding by Enos Slaughter in recovering Nicholson's smash off the right field wall saved a run.

Wyse, attempting the squeeze play, bunted in front of the plate and Sturgeon was forced easily at home. Brecheen got out of the jam by making Stan Hack force Wyse on a roller to Marty Marion.

Rough in Sixth

The next rough spot was the sixth when Clyde McCullough slammed a 368-foot single off the wall in left center, falling down as he rounded first base on what could well have been a sure double. Bob Sturgeon followed with an infield hit off Brecheen's glove but Harry applied the screws to leave both stranded.

Eddie Waitkus reached third on McCullough's single in the seventh after forcing Peanuts Lowrey who opened the inning with a walk. Pinch Hitter Mickey Livingston rapped sharply to Whitey Kurowski whose throw to Garagiola nipped Waitkus with feet to spare.

Bill Dickey, Ruffing Cut

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The New York Yankees today revealed that Pitcher Red Ruffing and Catcher Bill Dickey had been made free agents.

Dickey, who recently was replaced by Johnny Neun as manager of the Yanks, and Ruffing were one of New York's most famous batteries.

Ruffing, a 41-year-old right-hander, reported late this year and was placed on the retired list shortly after he was hit by a line drive on June 29, suffering a broken knee cap. Ruffing had won five straight games before suffering his only defeat.

The big red-head entered the majors in 1924 with the Boston Red Sox and came to the Yanks in 1930. He won 270 major league games, 226 of them for the Yanks and also won seven World Series games.

Dickey joined the Yanks in 1928 and from 1929 until he entered the service in 1944 he was their first-string catcher. He succeeded Joe McCarthy as manager of the Yanks early in the season and only recently resigned as pilot.

Collins Charges Pro Football With Poor Player Contracts

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Ted Collins, president of the Boston football Yanks of the National Professional League, charged today many players in pro football do not have "good employee contracts" and that the play-for-cash game will have to make some changes if it "wants to succeed."

Speaking at the season's first weekly meting of the Football Writers Association of New York, with officials and coaches of both the National League and All-America Conference on hand, Collins reviewed the case of Angelo Bertelli who was ordered recently by a Massachusetts court to play for the Los Angeles Dons of the AAC instead of the National League's Yanks.

The case was taken to court after Bertelli signed with both of the clubs. After the court's decision, Collins said he would keep the former Notre Dame ace at Boston, as a scout if he could not play, and that Bertelli would play at Los Angeles "over my dead body." Later, however, he gave Bertelli the green light to do his stuff for the Dons, and Bertelli is now with the AAC club on the Pacific Coast. As a result of his threat, Collins' introduction to the writers today was "the ghost of Ted Collins will no waddress you."

"I signed Bertelli," Collins explained, "because I didn't think he had a good contract. I still don't think so. But the judge thought he had. I think he is probably one of the greatest stars of all time. I wanted him to play. So he's out with Los Angeles now and will be playing there."

Lanham Midgets In Finale Toight

A national championship 50-lap finale sanctioned by the American Racing Drivers Association will climax a seven-event midget automobile racing program that closes 1946 activities at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway tonight.

As many ac 10,000 persons are expected to turn out to witness in action 35 top contestants, and little cars, and 10 of he Nation's leading point-scorers who will enter spirited bids for the prize money.

Larry Bloomer, the former Pennsylvanian milkman and 1945 national 50 and 100 lap champion, will be No. 1 seeded man in the competition, but will be trailed closely by acknowledged speed kings. Bill Schindler, the one-legged speed marvel; Ed (Dutch) Schaefer, Ted Tappett, Bill Holmes, Mike Joseph, George Fonder, Shorty McAndrews, Rex Records and Charley Miller will round out the first-fighters.

Virginia Tech Out to Recoup Lost Football Glory

Virginia Roundup

THREE PLAYERS were all tied up for the scoring leadership of the Southern Conference after opening games of the season.

The top trio, each with 12 points, include Jack Hutchinson, Greensburg, Pa., halfback, who helped Virginia Military Institute over Catawba, 21-7; Johnny Moore, 185-pound blocking back, who paced Clemson to a 39-0 win over Presbyterian, and Freshman Jack Cloud of Norfolk, Va., who tallied twice in William and Mary's victory over Ft. McClellan, Ala., Riflemen.

The Southern Conference gets down to really serious business this week with three clashes in the family squabble on the menu. Probably the No. 1 game will be played at Chapel Hill, N. C., where Virginia Tech's Gobblers engage the loaded North Carolina Tarheels.

Duke's defending champion Blue Devils, making their first appearance in four seasons under Coach Wallace Wade, journey to Raleigh, N. C., for a tussle with North Carolina State.

In the other conference game, the Virginia Military Institute Keydets invade Richmond to meet the University of Richmond Spiders.

Richmond.—The daily bag limit for quail in Virginia has been reduced from 10 to 8 by the State commission of game and fisheries.

The commission also:

Rejected a proposal to allow a five-day open season on ides in Chesterfield County.

Legalized shooting of foxes in Madison and Orange Counties from November 20 to January 20.

Set a bag limit of one a day or two per season on deer in Isle of Wight County.

Prohibited the use of dogs for hunting deer, foxes and bobcats during the deer season in Warren, Shenandoah, Rockingham, Page, Highland, Rockbridge, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Clarke, Alleghany and Frederick Counties.

Ashland.—Jack Sanford, former University of Richmond athlete and the baseball property of the Washington Nats, has started work as assistant coach at Randolph-Macon College, Dr. J. Earl Moreland, president, announced today.

Sanford will assist his brother, Head Coach Taylor Sanford, in training the Yellow Jacket football team, and will remain at Randolph Macon until the major league baseball training starts next spring.

Charlottesville.—A 14-man Country Club of Virginia (Richmond) golf team defeated the Farmington Country Club in match play yesterday on the local course, 11½ to 9½. A return match is scheduled for next Sunday at Richmond.

Winchester.—Golf awards have been presented to Winchester Country Club trophy winners.

The winners:

Club championship, Wilson Pugh and Mrs. Duncan Gibb; Byrd Trophy, Otis Sargent; McCarmac Trophy, Carl Campbell; Governor's Cup, Harry R. Kern, jr.

Jimmy Kitts Counting on Five Wins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 23.—From Dr. John R. Hutcheson, president, down to lowliest water boy, Virginia Polytechnic Institute has got itself in a football frame of mind for 1946 and its Southern Conference rivals may well keep an eye on the boys from this beautiful campus high in the Alleghanies.

Coach Jimmy Kitts, former Rice Institute mentor, back at VPI for his second year after service in the Navy, has a squad of 130 men preparing for the opener Saturday against North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C.

From that group he can pick three teams of almost equal strength and, of course, there are plenty of replacements.

VPI, which meets Maryland at College Park, October 16, freely admits it's trying to regain some of the glory it lost just before a two-year layoff and last season when its first postwar team lost seven and won only two.

And from its enrollment of 4100 (only 200 girls), Virginia Tech has drawn a huge number of outstanding gridmen.

He Changes Mind

Until a scrimmage with Duke last week, Kitts thought he wouldn't lose a game all season. But since, he's calmed down to expectations of winning five out of nine.

That might be considered quite a feat, considering the presence of such teams as Virginia, William and Mary, North Carolina State, Clemson, Washington and Lee, and VMI, besides North Carolina and Maryland, on the schedule.

On the brilliant side of the Gobblers roster are six tackles, six guards, four centers, one end, and backs from here to Halifax. Coach Kitts, as t matter of fact, considers his starting backfield and replacements better than William and Mary's, and it may be remembered that school started its season last week with a 61-0 victory.

At end, which is the weakest position in Coach Kitts combination of the single wing and T-system, Captain Bill Wilson is the lonely highly seasoned performer. There are eight of nine other tall husky candidates, but to date the standout has been Johnny Kroehling, a 22-year-old former Army man who played with the Gobblers in 1942.

Middle-Strength

In the middle of the line is most of the strength. Johnny Maskas, who lettered twice at VPI and was a tackle selection on most of the star teams including Greek All-American before joining the Marines, is back for a year before joining the Boston Yankees pro team. His running mate is Frank Ballard, 212-pound member of the 1945 squad. Other tackle standouts are Ross Orr, who won honorable mention for All-American in 1945; Jack Ittner, a 200-pound former schoolboy star, who with Maskas rate as the fastest men on the squad.

Virginians All, and in the Midst of Things . . .

Peace Fleet Wins 'Chase At Marlboro

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro, Md., Sept 23.—Taking command in the opening jumps, Joe Cambria's Peace Fleet made every post a winning one today. The 7-year-old bounded over a rain-soaked course to take the Tolchester Beach Purse, featuring the Monday program.

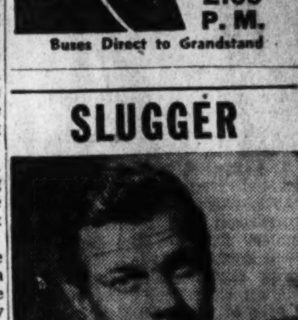

Say Miss, owned by Mrs. J. E. Ford, jr., was a strong finishing second, with H. C. Boorse's Bare Cupboard third in the field of six going a mile and a sixteenth.

The Port Tobacco Purse, the day's secondary feature, proved a romp for Mrs. O. Schorsch's Fine and Dandy with Jockey Johnny Tammaro aboard. J. J. McCarthy's Wild Knight, the pacemaker most of the way, was second, with G. W. Canard's Webs Miss third in the field of seven, going a mile and a sixteenth. The winner paid $5.70 and was clocked in 1:58 2/5.

Tammaro also had a hand in the day's $37.80 daily double. The Baltimore boy rode I. Beavers' Waterace to victory in the second race, getting the 7-year-old up in the final jump to pay $7.40. Jockey Danny Scocca rode the first winner, Mrs. K. Ayre's Bee Larkmead, to the wire at a $9.70 mutuel. Jockey R. Rodriguez, who finished second with J. H. Whiteley's Gradea in the first, was fined $50 for rough riding by the stewards. He was alleged to have shut off J. H. Morris' Setting Trick with Apprentice Bobby Runyon up.

SEC to Probe Sept. 3 Break In Stock List

The Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed yesterday that it will attempt to find the cause of the stock market break of September 3 by reconstructing—sale-by-sale—the entire market for that day.

James A. Treanor, jr., director of the SEC's trading and exchange division, said that the market for the day probably would be reconstructed in 15 minute averages so the commission would be able to tell which group was most active in each period—whether bankers, brokers, etc.

The market would be reconstructed from information from questionnaires sent out by the commission and received by all member firms of the New York Stock Exchange today.

The questionnaire asked for data on each round lot purchase or sale of stock on September 3, the day the Dow-Jones industrial average declined 10.51 points.

In the questionnaire the commission asks for the name of the security, the number of shares and price per share, the name and address of each customer, whether a purchase or sale, and if a sale, whether it represented a "sort sale" or a "stop loss" order. A stop loss sale consists of a sale by a broker who has received instructions from the stock owner to sell the stock if the price drops to a stated figure.

Treanor said that an investigation of a specific security or reconstruction of other trading days would be followed immediately if results of the investigation on September 3 so warranted. The commission requested that information in answer to the questionnaires be sent to the commission's New York office by October 7.

If pools were shown to be operating, Treanor said, then the SEC would take action against the pool operators. Subsequent action probably would be to tighten up SEC rules and exchange rules.

The SEC investigation of the last major break, which occured in 1937, found that some floor traders were active n hammering down the market. The investigation resulted in the adoption by the SEC of the short selling rule in October, 1937.

Dr. John H. Dillon has been appointed research director of the Textile Research Institute and Textile Foundation. He formerly was assistant director of research of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

Earnings Statements

Vick Chemical Co. reported for the fiscal year ended June 30 net profit of $3,802,358, compared with $2,737,662 for the previous year. Net was equal to $2.74 each on 1,385,960 shares outstanding, against $2.01 for a similar number in the preceding year giving effect to a two-for-one stock split carried out early this year.

McKesson & Robbins reported for the fiscal year ended June 30 consolidated net profit of $8,586,157, equal to $4.74 a common share, compared with $4,742,640, or $2.46 a share in the preceding year. Net sales of $338,046,788 for the latest period again established record peaks, the report said, and were 10 per cent greater than sales of $306,578,082 for the previous fiscal year.

Franklin Stores Corp. announced for fiscal year ended June 30 consolidated net income of $1,479,667, equal to $2.06 a common share, compared with $1,020,690, or $1.46 a share for the previous year. Sales reached a new record high at $23,471,917, an increase of 6 per cent over $22,146,837 in the preceding fiscal year.

Steel Operations Set New Postwar Peak

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Steel mills will set a new postwar high in operations this week, working at 90.4 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

This rate will produce 1,593,200 tons of steel and will compare with an operating rate of 89.1 and tonnage of 1,570,300 last week.

Stock Issue Offered

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—An investment group headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., today publicly offered 85,512 shares of common stock of Scovill Manufacturing Co. at $30 a share. The shares represented the unsubscribed portion of 149,548 offered to stockholders.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Cotton futures turned sharply lower in late trading today on a flurry of commission house selling, influenced by the break in securities. Losses of as much as $1.75 a bale were touched, with final prices 45 cents to $1.55 a bale lower.

Prior to the sell-off, the market had moved generally higher on buying stimulated by unwanted rains over much of the Eastern and Central cotton belts and expectations of another substantial selling movement in cotton textiles, when the higher ceilings for October are announced.

Late Selling Hits Stocks, Erases Rally

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The stock market resumed its downswing today under late selling presure after an early attempt to extend the Friday rally failed to follow through.

Gains of as much as 4 points were widely distributed in the wake of a steady opening and the ticker tape, for a brief interval, was a minute late. Activity then slackened appreciably and extreme advances were reduced or canceled. There was a seedup in the final hour as offerings converged on rails and industrials. Closing casualties of 1 to better than 5 points were numerous although assorted pivotals ended above bottom.

The morning upswing was attributed by brokers partly to buying on the idea that a further technical revival was likely. The Harriman appointment to the Commerce Department, it was added, brought in a certain amount of bidding.

No outstanding reason was given for the last-minute reversal and commission men generally blamed it on persistent bearishness regarding labor disputes, foreign problems and apprehension over business in coming months.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off 1.2 points at 61.1, which was only .2 above the 17-month low of last Thursday. Both the rail and utility indexes went through their lows of the year.

Prominent on the retreat were Santa Fe, off 5⅛ at $82.87; Chrysler 4 at $82, Southern Railway 3¾ at $33.25, Union Pacific at $119, Pennsylvania Railroad 2⅜ at $25.75 (lowest since 1944), Eastman Kodak 2¾ at $205.25, American Telephone 2¾ at $171.50 and United States Steel 1½ at $66.62.

Small advances were retained by American Can, Great Northern, General Foods, United States Gypsum and American Home Products.

Cotton futures, strong in the morning, turned around and finished off 45 cents to $1.55 a bale. At Chicago wheat was up ⅜ to 2½ cents a bushel, corn 1⅛ to 2, oats 1 to 2⅜ and barley ¼ to ½.

R. K. Mellon Heads Merged Banks

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (AP).—Richard K. Mellon today was named board chairman of the new billion-dollar Mellon National Bank & Trust Co. at the first meeting of the firm's directors.

R. K. Mellon

The bank, fifth largest in the Nation, opened its doors for business today. It was formed by a merger of the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon National Bank.

Frank R. Denton was named vice chairman, Clarence Stanley chairman of the executive committee, and Lawrence E. Murray president of the new institution.

Rails May Cut Employment, ICC Warned

By the Associated Press

Elmer E. Smith, senior general attorney for the Illinois Central Railroad, predicted yesterday that unless freight rates are increased the railroads would have to cut employment.

"Inevitably," said Smith, they would "have to discharge men and curtail work and purchases at a time when rail traffic is at its peacetime peak and when there is a world of work to be done."

Appearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on behalf of the carriers' fight for a rate hike, Smith said they were unable to carry out proposed modernization programs on the basis of 1946 earnings and were counting on the increases to help make the work possible in 1947.

Less Than in World War I

Attorneys for the 13 major American railroads declared today that the 25 per cent freight rate increases they seek are far below those granted during and after World War I.

The battery of lawyers representing the Association of American Railroads opened final arguments before the ICC on this petition for advanced freight charges. They were granted 10 hours in which to state their case, after which opponents of the proposed increases will be heard.

James M. Souby, general solicitor for the association, said that although authority for increases up to 25 per cent is requested, the rises, varying on different types of cargo, will average out at less than 20 per cent.

Traffic Drop Cited

Pointing out that railroad passenger traffic has declined more than one third below the wartime peak, the railroad attorney estimated that the carriers will lose more than 400 million dollars in passenger operations in 1947.

Edwin H. Burgess, vice president and general counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, argued that the Nation's economy can readily bear an increase in freight rates.

"Freight rate increases as proposed will still have a lower percentage relationship to the present value of traffic than was true in 1941," Burgess said.

"If the then existing ratio of freight rates to commodity values were to be preserved, the freight rates would need to be increased 38 per cent."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—A strong buying movement developed in all grains today and, despite heavy profit-taking in the last half-hour, final quotations showed gains extending to more than 2 cents in wheat, corn and oats.

At one time wheat and oats had gains ranging to more than 4 cents while corn was up more than 3 cents. January and March wheat hit new seasonal highs, the nearby month spurting to 2.03 before selling entered the pit in any volume.

Wheat closed ⅜@2½ higher, January, 1.99⅛@1.99¾; corn was up 1⅛@2; January, 1.39⅛@1.39¼; oats were ahead a cent to 2⅜; November, 78⅛@78, and Barley gained ¼@½; December, 1.45¼.

Range follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—

Quaker Oats Net Mounts in Year

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Quaker Oats Co. has reported net income of $6,471,051, equal to $7.71 a common share, in the fiscal year ended June 30. In the preceding fiscal year the company had a net income of $5,401,431, equal to $6.19 a common share.

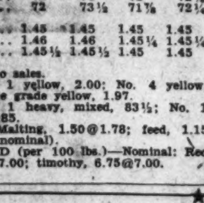

Sales for the last fiscal year totaled $154,831,183, compared with $151,083,671 last year. Stuart said the company "suffered substantial losses in output because black market trading has made it very difficult for companies like ours, who are operating strictly under OPA controls and regulations, to purchase the supplies we need."

Man's Dreams of Ideal Marriage Fold When He Learns His Sweetheart Is Oil Magnate's Daughter, Who Wants Him to Be Idler Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In 1943, while serving in the Air Corps, I met a charming girl of 23, one year my junior. It was love at first sight and I asked her to marry me. When I had told her about my family, she professed that she, too, came from an "average home" background. The setup seemed ideal, but before we could complete our marriage plans I was sent to the Pacific.

Our letters strengthened the tie between us. The tropic jungles hardly bothered me, because her image was always with me and I dreamed of the day when we would be together. I pictured myself,—sentimental fool that I am,—coming to our little home after an honest day's work. I saw myself giving her all the little things she probably had always wanted and been denied.

Two years later,—but still a year before I returned,—my dreams crashed. Quite by accident I learned that her father is a millionaire oil magnate. When I pressed her about this in letters, she admitted that it was so,—but explained that because of my family's modest means and my personal feelings about the filthy rich she thought best to conceal it until we were married.

She told me, "We will get married as soon as you return," and said that once married, I can't do work of any kind. It seems her father struggled laboriously for years to make his millions and has instilled in her the idea that her husband should never work. He is to devote all his time to her alone. Together she and her husband would play, travel, entertain; in short, foolishly spend her father's money, the amassing of which has left him a tired old man.

He Has Pride; Isn't for Sale

SHE TOLD me that all her life she had bought everything she wanted, and that despite the way I felt about her theories of life, she wanted me. I don't have much money nor much to offer her, but I do have pride and I'm not for sale. Consequently I broke the engagement. She retaliated by marrying her father's business partner, a man 32 years her senior.

Her last letter warned me that she is going to divorce her husband and come to me, at the slightest encouragement from me. She said she realized she had made a mistake and would give up everything just so we could be together. I didn't answer that letter and haven't heard from her since. I was discharged six months ago. I have my work. I go out with other girls. I play around, laugh and have what some call a good time. But I'm utterly miserable.

I still love her and this life of pretense isn't much fun. I've been tempted, time and again, to write to her; but I haven't, for fear of the consequences. I'm egotistical enough to think she would come to me; and there can never be another for me. Of that I'm sure. But can I ask her to live my way,—and cook, clean, sew and bear my children on an income of $60 a week? If we go back to each other, can we live happily? Please try to advise me at your earliest convenience. So much depends upon it. T. R.

Case Harks Back To Circe Legend

DEAR T. R.: In my judgment, your dream girl's performance indicates that she is too schooled in the use of money as a substitute for personal worth or consistent development of character, to accomodate herself either happily or permanently to the married way of life you could offer on terms that would square with your concepts of manly self respect.

Note these things: 1. In the beginning she intended to have you on her terms, and stalked her objective with bland deceit. 2. When you called her hand and broke the engagement, her "retaliation" was a manifesto of immature wilful temperament outraged. 3. Her more recent declaration of intent to divorce her husband is in the same unstable, imperious vein. 4. Even her voucher to "give up everything" just to be with you,—written while she is another man's wife,—is a revelation of unethical, unbridled hedonism.

You have character which can't be bought and sold by her dad's gold; but she has gilt-edged charms of the vampire variety, it seems, which might work equal havoc to your soul if you opened your arms to her again. As I see the picture, you took the right turn when you broke the engagement and later ignored her come-on letter. My advice is, stick to that course. You are miserable now in much the same way that the legendary sailors were, when bypassing Circe by the skin of their teeth, while still reacting to her song in their ears. M. H.

Few Know Appointee's Wife

Harriman Name Hovers Over Today's Teacups

By Marie McNair

TEA TIME topics about town this week invariably bring up "L'Affaire Wallace" and eventually turn to his successor, W. Averell Harriman, and—naturally enough—to Mrs. Harriman as newest of the Cabinet wives.

Little known in Washington, the wife of the recently named Secretary of Commerce is, however, a personage in her own right. She's good looking, too, with deep brown eyes and a cheery smile.

The wife of our present Ambassador to Great Britain started life as Marie Norton. She first married Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney jr., who is the father of her two children, Nancy, just out of her teens, and Harry Payne Whitney, who served with the Seabees during the war.

As Mrs. Harriman, the former Marie Norton has made her home in New York, at Arden House, a 150-room mansion at Harriman, N. Y., which she turned over to the Navy as a convalescent home for casualties of World War II.

MRS. HARRIMAN

Gallery Well Known

The Marie Harriman Gallery in New York City has long been a benefaction to struggling artists, for Mrs. Harriman has arranged innumerable exhibitions of their work and sold their pictures.

For four years she worked untiringly in war relief, serving as fulltime treasurer of the Ship's Service Committee, a job that took up all her daytime hours and many of her evenings. Added to these responsibilities, she took charge of a number of English refugee children as well as having the care of her foster child, Eddy Duchin's little girl, whose mother died in childbirth.

And here's a fact that few people knew during those busy years. Mrs. Harriman's eyesight began to fail and it was only with constant medical care and treatment that she was finally cured.

When her husband was named United States Ambassador to Russia three years ago, Mrs. Harriman remained in New York. "I'm not sure I would want to go to Russia in wartime," she had said at the time, "and, besides, I'm too busy here."

Daughter His Hostess

Mr. Harriman's hostess at the embassy in Moscow was his sprightly daughter by a former marriage, Kathleen, who started a journalistic career writing society news on a New York paper after graduation six years ago from Bennington College in Vermont.

When Averell Harriman went to London as lend-lease administrator, Kathleen went too, got a job as correspondent for a news service and served her apprenticeship just like any other cub. Later she switched to the London bureau of Newsweek, but resigned when her father was named Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

An excellent shot, there's no one Averell Harriman would prefer to hunt with than his pretty daughter. Miss Harriman is something to see on skiis, too, and has any number of ski championship trophies, some of them from Sun Valley, a resort her father helped establish.

Gertrude Stein Always Made Words Profitable

Cambridge, Mass. (U.P.).—During her college days at Radcliffe here, the late Gertrude Stein was a favorite student of the famed philosopher William James. But when she sat down to write her final examination for him, she was tired, having been to the opera the night before.

"Dear Professor James," she scribbled on her paper, "I am so sorry but I do not feel a bit like an exam in philosophy today."

Replied the professor by postcard: "Dear Miss Stein, I understand perfectly how you feel. I often feel like that myself."

He gave her the highest mark in the class.

The Gentler Sex

International Joiners

By Malvina Lindsay

DESPITE all the talk of war and power politics, peoples of the world are now reaching hands to each other across national boundaries as never before. This is being done by teachers, scientists, churchmen, students, journalists, clubwomen, college alumnae, Girl Scouts and others, through international organizations and conferences.

The extent of this quiet, almost underground work to head off the next war is emphasized in the spirit of the 100 American leaders meeting in Washington this week as members of the National Commission for Educational, Scientific and Cultural Information. Some of them are fresh from international gatherings of groups already in action to increase understanding among the professional people, workers, and other John Does of the world. They are still fired with hope and enthusiasm, free of the frustration and "realism" that usually descend on diplomats.

INTERNATIONAL meetings have broken out in a rash over the world in recent months. Teachers have just founded a world organization, churchmen a world council. The Federation of Atomic Scientists is getting in touch with 1000 scientists and 40 countries to extend material aid and fellowship; the General Federation of Women's Clubs has established contact with about 40 clubs abroad. The International Federation of University Women met in London in July; the International Alliance of Women in Switzerland in August. Youth groups have assembled in London and in Prague. The Women's International Democratic Federation, representing 41 countries, was organized in Paris a year ago. An international assembly of 200 women leaders from foreign countries will meet at South Kortright, N. Y., next month.

What is the use of all these international "good societies," as they are sometimes cynically labeled? Biggest question of all—what can these groups accomplish working outside Russia's iron curtain?

One answer is the past record of international organizations. One of Hitler's first acts, on coming to power, was to disband those in Germany. Their members went under cover there, as in Italy, France, Japan, all countries that fell under totalitarian rule. Some of their leaders died before firing squads, others in concentration camps. Some worked with resistance movements and were on hand to help the liberating forces. In Japan the revived women's clubs were an aid to Americans in establishing democratic procedures.

UULIKE the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (of which the National Commission now meeting is an American adjunct), many of these international groups are associations of people rather than of governments. The organizations and individuals that comprise their membership participate directly rather than as national units. This is one step toward a parliament of mankind. Also, their conferences develop international friendships on the lasting basis of like interests. And they give their members something positive to do toward peace.

Yet—it is true that they work outside Russia, the pivotal point in the whole program. The Soviet Union has not yet joined UNESCO. It has remained aloof from world professional and cultural groups in the main, though it sent a large delegation to Paris when the Women's International Democratic Federation, which includes many leftist members, was formed.

But the international joiners are not discouraged by this. They believe that if their programs are effective and successful, Soviet citizens may eventually be drawn to them. They maintain that in the long run knowledge is a force more powerful than bombs. No wall, let alone a curtain, will be strong enough to withstand thought, ideas, information. The more cooperative understanding there is generated in the world, the stronger will be the invisible bombardment of the iron curtain.

Belgian Lace Is Headdress For Mrs. Lose

Married Saturday in the Memorial Chapel of Muhlenberg College were Miss Carolina R. Manville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith R. Manville of Allentown, Pa., and Richard Brodehead Lose, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lose, jr., of Overbrook and Washington. The Rev. Steward F. Custard officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown with bouffant skirt and fantail train and fingertip veil, falling from a headdress of Belgian fan lace worn by her great-great-grandmother. Her bouquet was of gardenias and white pompons with orchid center.

Mrs. James R. Gainfort was matron of honor for her sister, wearing a burgundy taffeta gown with shirred skirt and shoulder-length veil with Juliet cap. She carried yellow, burgundy and white pompons.

The maid of honor, Miss Ann Hurdell, was similarly dressed in gray. Bridesmaids, the Misses Harriet Dicke and Jane Rutzel, Mrs. Burton Sexton and Mrs. Keith R. Manville, jr., wore matching dresses in turquoise taffeta.

John J. Lose was best man for his brother, and ushers were Robert Lockwood, Charles McClintock, Daniel Cherry and the bride's brothers, Keith and Alfred Manville.

Following a reception at Lehigh Country Club, the couple left for a trip to the seashore.

Your Questions On Homemaking

How can I remove wax from a lamb's wool waxer after using it? What can I get to clean white galoshes? A wax candle melted on my leather gloves and they became stiff. How can I remove the wax? C. K. B.

Use warm soapsuds to remove the wax from the mop. Rinse in lukewarm water until water is clear. Dry at room temperature and shake several times during drying. Wash the mop every time you use it.

Scrub the galoshes with a soft brush and warm soapsuds to which a bit of lanndry bleach has been added. Rinse with clear water.

Safest procedure for your leather gloves is to have them dry cleaned, but if they're washable, wash in warm soapsuds, using a soft brush to scrub the soiled parts. Rinse in clear water and add a little soap to the final rinse water to keep the gloves soft. Pat out excess moisture with a towel and let them dry slowly away from artificial heat. When the gloves are almost dry, finger press them by gently stretching the leather in both directions.

I would like to know whether a white with black design shower curtain can be tinted with yellow. I believe the material is rayon and has been treated with water repellent. B. H. R.

I wouldn't advise dyeing the shower curtain. A tint applied in cool water bath won't be permanent enough to withstand the constant wetting a shower curtain gets, and boiling the curtain with dye will affect the water repellency. You can dye it if you want to have it retreated for repellency.

Hair oil has stained our celotex walls. Is there any way to get this grease stain off the wall, as I know from experience that when we paper, the grease will come through? J. H. K.

Sponge the spots repeatedly with carbon tetrachloride until they disappear, or hold a white blotter over the spot and press with a warm iron until all the grease is absorbed. You might also try making a poultice of Fuller's earth and carbon tetrachloride. Apply the paste and let it dry thoroughly. Remove with carbon tetrachloride.
